NEBRASKA SPELLS "SPORTSMANSHIP"

The University of Nebraska is known and respected all over the nation for its red-attired fans, as well as its football teams.

Nebraska fans also have a nationwide reputation for good sportsmanship, at home and away.

"Big League"—that's the way Nebraska teams and fans have acquitted themselves in past seasons, and that's the same goal for 1987.

The University of Nebraska urges all Husker fans to continue this fine tradition of sportsmanship by extending courtesy to the visiting teams and officials.

All of us on the Cornhusker Staff salute our fans as the greatest in the nation and thank you for your support and sportsmanship.

Yours for Nebraska.

Senior Linebacker Steve Forch of Lincoln, Neb., has made his first two career starts as a Husker memorable ones. Against Arizona State he picked off a pass at the Husker 31 with 2:38 left in the game, all but clinching Nebraska's 35-28 win over the 12th-ranked Sun Devils. That interception was Forch's career first. In addition to the pickoff, Forch recorded seven tackles and broke up an ASU pass. In his second start last Saturday against the Gamecocks, Forch picked off a Todd Ellis pass at the Nebraska 46 in South Carolina's first drive of the game, which set up Chris Drennan's 27-yard field goal—the first Husker score of the game. With the score 19-21 in favor of the Gamecocks in the fourth quarter, Forch caused Keith Bing to fumble, which Jeff Tomjack recovered on the South Carolina 31. Four plays later, Keith Jones was in the endzone and the Huskers took the lead and stayed there. Forch tallied six tackles (four solo) including one for a loss of four yards. In four games total, Forch has the most tackles on the team with 28.

Nebraska vs. Kansas

The Scouting Report

by Tom Simons

TODAY: It's Nebraska and Kansas in the 1987 Big Eight Conference opener for both teams as the Huskers and Jayhawks meet before the 152nd-consecutive sellout at Memorial Stadium—a continuing NCAA record. Both teams come in off come-from-behind home-field victories last weekend. Second-ranked Nebraska trailed South Carolina, 21-13 midway in the third quarter, but launched an 18-play, 96-yard scoring drive which ate up 9:01 at the end of the third quarter and the start of the fourth. The Huskers pulled within 21-19 despite losing starting quarterback Steve Taylor to injury midway in the drive. They then forced two Gamecock turnovers to set up Keith Jones' go-ahead touchdown and Chris Drennan's game-clinching 43-yard field goal with 2:07 left. Kansas, meanwhile, got a late touchdown from freshman quarterback Kevin Verdugo to edge Southern Illinois, 16-15, ending a 10-game Jayhawk losing streak. Nebraska today is going for its 13th-straight win in a conference opener.

THE SERIES: The Huskers and Jayhawks meet in one of the longest-running rivalries in all of college football. It's the 94th time the two teams have hooked up on the gridiron and it's the 82nd-consecutive renewal of the rivalry. Nebraska leads Kansas, 67-21-3, and has won 18 in a row from the Jayhawks since Kansas last won here, 23-13, in 1968. The Huskers lead the series in Lincoln, 32-15-2, including 23-7-2 in Memorial Stadium. Last time here, Nebraska won, 56-6, in 1985.

LAST YEAR: At Lawrence, Clete Blakeman (remember him from last week?) subbing for the injured Steve Taylor at quarterback, threw for three touchdowns and ran for another as he led the Huskers to a 70-0 romp. It was Nebraska's most one-sided victory ever

THE COACHES: The Huskers' Tom Osborne (Hastings, 1959) is 141-32-2 in his 15th year as a head coach, all at Nebraska, and ranks as the third-winningest active coach in NCAA Division I-A. His .811 career percentage ranks him behind only Oklahoma's Barry Switzer and Penn State's Joe Paterno. The Jayhawks' Bob Valesente (Ithaca, 1962) is 4-11-0 in his second year as a head coach, both at Kansas. Osborne is 14-0-0 vs. KU, 1-0-0 vs. Valesente.

IN NCAA STATS: The Huskers' Rod Smith, Keith Jones and Steve Taylor all rank among NCAA Division I-A statistical leaders. Defending NCAA punt-return champ Smith is second this week with his 25.6-yard average. Jones is 13th in scoring at 6.3 points per game and 22nd in rushing at 102.5 yards per game. Taylor is 17th in passing efficiency at 135.8. Nebraska is in the top 10 in five team statistical categories—first in punt returns (24.8 yards per return), second in scoring offense (40.8 points per game), fifth in rushing defense (64.0 yards per game), sixth in rushing offense (316.0 yards per game), and 10th in total offense (450.5 yards per game).

Chancellor's Club

Chancellor Martin A. Massengale

The Chancellor's Club is a distinguished group of major donors that recognizes the importance of private gift support to the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. These individuals and corporations provide a margin of excellence for the University by meeting the special needs of the campus in many areas.

As a major comprehensive teaching and research institution, the University of Nebraska-Lincoln is dedicated to providing the highest quality academic program for its students. We believe that a University education for undergraduates must promote the understanding of broad areas of knowledge as well as assist in preparing students for future careers. In addition, we are committed to the belief that UNL students must be involved in an educational experience that will make a qualitative difference in their lives.

During the past two years, the Chancellor's Commission on General Liberal Education has addressed the question, "What constitutes a quality educational program for undergraduates?" In its final report, issued in April, 1987, the Commission states: "A vital general education enables students to understand and participate creatively in the interaction between traditional knowledge and the changes that are reshaping society."

During its intensive study, the Commission consulted UNL faculty, staff, students, and alumni about the qualities of an educated person. Consensus was reached on a number of goals that UNL will seek to achieve as it strengthens its general education program.

The Commission recommends that all undergraduate students have the opportunity to develop competency in five general areas of knowledge including culture and society, arts and humanities, basic and applied science, mathematics, and written and oral communications.

The UNL community believes that, in addition to sharing in a common body of knowledge, educated persons possess a number of basic skills, which the Commission defines as:

Objectivity: the ability to think critically, using evidence to construct arguments and to test conclusions;

Synthesis: the ability to combine information and see the interrelation of areas of study;

Awareness of Assumptions: a willingness to reexamine accepted truths with a recognition that facts and value judgments are interrelated;

Tolerance: a respect for different ways of knowing and an understanding of pluralistic representations of human experience;

Curiosity: an eagerness to be active rather than passive in one's learning as a professional and a person; and Flexibility: the imagination and courage to consider alternatives and entertain new ideas.

One of UNL's priorities for the 1987-88 academic year is to act upon the Commission's findings and to enhance the general education component of the undergraduate educational experience. I have appointed a committee to begin implementation of a UNL Program for the Enhancement of General Education. It is the charge of this committee to refine and to implement the recommendations of the Chancellor's Commission on General Liberal Education.

Our students will face considerable challenges in the years ahead as leaders in their professions and their communities. We are committed to providing them with the intellectual skills and broad knowledge that they will need as professionals and productive citizens in the twenty-first century.

BANDERAS ACCEPTS, THRIVES ON ROLE OF BLOCKER

By Ben Boyle

Except for the likes of Tony Jeter and Junior Miller, tight end hasn't exactly been a glamour position at Nebraska.

In fact, current Husker tight end Tom Banderas had never even heard of the above All-Americans until he arrived on the Nebraska campus in 1983.

So what brought a highly-touted receiver from Oak Grove, Mo., to Nebraska where he would most likely spend more time blocking defensive ends than catching passes?

"I didn't even know about Nebraska, or Mike Rozier and the Big Red until I was recruited as a senior in high school," Banderas said. "I came here because I wanted to go someplace where I could be the best I could after five years."

Four-and-one-half years and just 11 receptions later, some statistical buffs may question whether Banderas made the right choice. But at 6-2, 240, Banderas is solid proof that one doesn't need to rack up breathtaking numbers to make a major contribution in the nation's most successful college football program over the last 25 years.

"It's kind of funny, because in high school I caught all the balls, but when I came here it was the reverse for me," Banderas said. "Sure, I'd like to have 10, three-reception games and score five or six touchdowns, but I'm satisfied with my blocking because that's my key to helping the team."

Although his exploits may not always show up in the Sunday paper, Banderas has proven his worth to the people who count the most.

"Fans tend to look at the stats and not at the total game," Banderas said. "That's what the coaches are for because after they grade your performance you can see how you really did. I could catch five balls and score two touchdowns, but if I block like crap I lose my job."

Apparently he's been doing his job because the only thing that has kept Banderas out of the starting lineup is injury. Banderas missed five early-season games last year with a pulled hamstring and a knee strain. After straining his knee in this year's season-opener against Utah State, Sept. 5, he thought to himself, "here I go again."

"When I woke up Sunday morning (after the Utah State game) I really thought something was wrong and I might need surgery," he said. "But it started coming around and I had a really good game against UCLA."

Banderas wasn't on the receiving end of any of Steve Taylor's record-setting five touchdown passes against the Bruins, but don't be misled. Given the opportunity, he has produced.

Against Kansas last year, Banderas hauled in four passes for 39 yards and two touchdowns. He also kept several scoring drives alive in the Huskers' 30-15 victory over LSU in the Sugar Bowl with four receptions for 42 yards.

"Those two games showed people that I can catch and I'm not just a blocker," he said. "But if blocking is my role on the team, I'll do it, and do it hard."

However, Banderas admits he occasionally daydreams about having more big days.

"I think about having a 30-reception year once in a while, but it's just a real quick thought," he mused. "I know it's not realistic, so I don't worry about it."

And then his attention turns toward his more challenging assignments.

"I think anybody can make a catch, but I don't think just anybody can blow someone off the line," Banderas said. "This has been my best year so far for blocking. I've been manhandling defensive ends and grading pretty good."

Banderas' receiving Coach Ron Brown said, "Tom is kind of like an extra offensive lineman. He's got to be able to be a very good one-on-one blocker against defensive ends; he must have enough quickness to come down and block defensive tackles; and he must have the quickness and agility to get downfield to block quick, defensive backs. Our tight ends must have that versatility, and he does. We've played several types of defensive schemes this year. Tom has had to block some of the quickest guys in the country. He's had some tough assignments and has done a good job."

Several of Nebraska's receivers have already had big days of defensive schemes this year. Tom has had to block some of the to come down and block defensive tackles; and he must have the quickness this season. At times, Banderas' talent as a receiver may be overlooked, but he knows his day will come.

"Rod (Smith), Todd (Millikan) and Dana (Brinson) have all had big games," Banderas said. "But I think everybody will get their own because we have so many receivers we can go to."

In high school, Banderas was used primarily as a receiver. At Nebraska, his most important role has been blocking. In the future, he hopes to do both.

"Deep down inside I think I can play pro ball," he said. "There, they will throw me the ball and I can prove that I can catch. And they should already know that I can block."

If they don't, just ask opposing defensive ends.

Athletic Director Bob Devaney

Bob Devaney ranks as one of the finest football coaches in college history, after his colorful 16-year career at Wyoming and Nebraska, and now ranks as one of the nation's most outstanding athletic directors.

Devaney is in his 26th year of providing drive, leadership and pride in the Cornhusker athletic program. He arrived in 1962, charged with the mission of building a successful football program, and he succeeded far beyond anyone's expectations. During an 11-year stint as Husker football coach, Devaney's teams won 101, lost only 20 and tied two for a winning percentage of .829. His career mark of 136-30-7 (.806) ranked him as the winningest coach in the nation at the time of his retirement in 1973. Devaney's teams won eight Big Eight titles and two consecutive national championships during the 1962-72 span, with his teams going to nine bowl games. He twice won four consecutive Big Eight titles.

Devaney's 1971 team, which posted a 13-0 record and twice played for the national championship (beating Oklahoma, 35-31, in the "Game of the Century," and Alabama, 38-6, in the Orange Bowl), has been hailed as the best college team of all time. Bob was inducted into the National Football Hall of Fame in 1981.

Since becoming athletic director in 1967, Devaney has brought the same success to the overall Husker athletic program that he brought to the football program. Under his leadership, Nebraska annually sets the pace in the Big Eight all-sports race with solid entries in all men's and women's sports.

Under Devaney's guidance, Memorial Stadium has been enlarged, artificial turf has been installed and replaced three times, a Stadium Office building was constructed, and sports facilities such as the Otto and Gladys Baumann Baseball Complex, Buck Beltzer Baseball Stadium, Ed Weir Track and the women's softball stadium have come into being.

It was Devaney's leadership, working in conjunction with the Nebraska Legislature, that resulted in the passage of a special cigarette tax to provide funds for a new athletic complex, the beautiful basketball arena, indoor track, swimming and other sports building which opened on the State Fair Grounds in 1976. University of Nebraska Regents recognized Devaney's contributions to that four-and-a-half-acre structure by naming it the Bob Devaney Sports Center in 1978.

Devaney currently spearheads a fundraising drive to provide the University of Nebraska with a new Faculty-Student Recreation Center, as well as an indoor practice facility.

Devaney received many other honors during his coaching career. He was named Coach of the Year by the Walter Camp Foundation, the Football Writers of America, Football News and the Washington TD Club in 1971; and he was tabbed to coach in numerous all-star games, such as the Hula Bowl, Coaches All-America, Blue-Gray and East-West Shrine. He also coached the College All-Stars against the Dallas Cowboys in the 1972 Chicago game.

A graduate of Alma (Michigan) College in 1939, Devaney served as a high school coach at Big Beaver, Keego Harbor, Saginaw and Alpena in Michigan before joining Biggie Munn and Duffy Daugherty at Michigan State. In 1957 he became head coach at Wyoming, where his teams posted a 35-10-5 record.

Devaney is married to the former Phyllis Wiley. They have a son, Mike, and a daughter, Pat, both graduates of the University of Nebraska. Bob and Phyllis also have two grandchildren. □

Tom Osborne Head Football Coach/ Assistant Athletic Director

Long established as the premier offensive coach in the nation, Tom Osborne is in his 15th campaign at Nebraska, firmly entrenched as a top candidate for the Football Hall of Fame.

Since taking the reins from Bob Devaney—already enshrined in the Hall of Fame—in 1972, Osborne has compiled a remarkable record of 137 wins, 32 losses and two ties. That's a winning percentage of .807, which spells big winner in any league.

More important, perhaps, is a string of 14 consecutive bowl appearances with teams that have won nine or more games. During the past five years, the Huskers have traveled at an .850 clip, posting a 53-9 record. Every one of Tom's teams have wound up in the Top 10 rankings of either the AP or UPI polls, or both, solid testimony of the nation's most consistent college football program.

The Huskers rolled to a 10-2 record in 1986, capped by a 30-15 triumph over LSU in the Sugar Bowl. It was Nebraska's second Sugar Bowl appearance in three years and its 25th bowl appearance overall.

Middle guard Danny Noonan led Husker honor winners in 1986 as a unanimous All-America pick, while defensive end Broderick Thomas was a sophomore All-America selection. Six Huskers were named to the All-Big Eight first team.

Osborne's teams have won the NCAA rushing title four times, finished second twice and third once during the past seven years.

Adding even more luster to Osborne's coaching career is the fact that the Cornhuskers have made history by producing three consecutive Outland Trophy winners (Dave Rimington in 1981 and 1982 and Dean Steinkuhler in 1983) and two consecutive Lombardi winners (Rimington in 1982 and Steinkuhler in 1983), while also winning the 1983 Heisman Trophy (Mike Rozier).

During Tom's 14-year career, the Huskers have produced 28 All-America players and 23 academic All-America players, as well as seven NCAA postgraduate scholarship winners and three National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame Scholar-Athlete recipients.

Under Osborne, Nebraska has extended its string of consecutive Top-10 rankings to 17 and consecutive bowl appearances to 18, the top mark in the nation.

Only two Osborne-coached teams have finished lower than second in the Big Eight—the 1976 team which tied for fourth, but only one game out of a first-ever three-way tie for first, and last year's 10-2 team, which lost to Colorado and Oklahoma. His teams have won or shared the conference title six times in the past 11 years (1975, 1978, 1981, 1982, 1983 and 1984).

He has three times been named Big Eight coach of the year (1975, 1978 and 1980), and four times been named District VI coach of the year by the American Football Coaches Association and Kodak (1978, 1979, 1980 and 1983). In addition, in 1978 he was named Bobby Dodds national coach of the year by the Atlanta Quarterback Club and Delta Air Lines for his efforts toward the advancement of the higher and more notable aspects of college coaching. And in 1983, Football News named Osborne national coach of the year.

In 1982, he was the first recipient of the Distinguished Nebraskalander Award from the Nebraskaland Foundation, and in 1983 he was named national coach of the year by the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

Osborne, who graduated from Hastings College in 1959 before logging pro time with the Washington Redskins and San Francisco 49ers, joined Devaney as an assistant in 1962. In 1965 he received his Ph.D. in educational psychology, then elected football coaching as a career. He coached the Husker receivers and helped build the NU offense into one of the most potent in the nation during the 1970 and 1971 national championship years.

While Osborne was a newcomer to the head coaching ranks in 1973, he was no stranger to Nebraska football. Osborne was a member of Bob Devaney's incomparable staff for 11 years—the last six as a key organizer of a steamroller offense.

During his tenure on the Devaney staff, Osborne headed the passing game strategy and coached the receivers. When Devaney announced his retirement from coaching in favor of full-time athletic director duties following the 1971 season, he announced Osborne as his designated successor. Osborne served as assistant head coach and director of recruiting in Devaney's final campaign in 1972, then took the head coaching reins in 1973.

An outstanding high school athlete at Hastings High School in the mid-1950s, Osborne was named Nebraska prep athlete of the year. Passing up major college offers, Osborne became a star quarterback and basketball player for Hastings College, where both his father and grandfather had matriculated. At Hastings, he played both football and basketball for Coach Tom McLaughlin, who was elected to the Nebraska Football Hall of Fame in 1982. In 1959 he was named state college athlete of the year—the first athlete in Nebraska history to win both the high school and college honor.

In 1962 he contacted Bob Devaney and secured a position as a graduate assistant on the Husker staff. He continued in that capacity until he obtained his master's degree in 1963. Continuing his dual role in education and football coaching, Osborne gained his doctorate in 1965 and, holding the academic rank of instructor of educational psychology at Teachers College, was a part-time coach.

Osborne, born Feb. 23, 1937, elected to pursue coaching full-time in 1967 and became the Huskers' receivers coach, a decision that NU fans have applauded since.

Married to the former Nancy Tederman, Osborne is the father of a son, Mike, and daughters Ann and Susie. Mike followed in his father's footsteps by playing football at Hastings College, where he was a quarterback. He is now a graduate student. □

University of Nebraska: Innovation and Excellence for America's Future

Sculpture Garden

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln (UNL) is building excellence for America's future.

Nationally recognized as an innovative land-grant university, UNL is continuously designing new academic frameworks and developing new research structures that are responsive to our nation's changing needs and expectations.

To provide its students with the mental skills and broad perspectives of educated citizens, UNL has recently conducted a comprehensive, university-wide review of its general liberal education program. It has strengthened the role of humanities in undergraduate education by developing new courses stressing critical interpretation, analysis and effective writing.

Working with the private sector, UNL has become the first land-grant university in the nation to offer an interdisciplinary major in agriculture and business and has created the nation's first Franchise Studies Program. The University's innovative Nebraska Technical Assistance Center and Food Processing Center are examples of other major cooperative efforts between the state, the University and the private sector.

Rich in pioneering history and spirit, UNL was chartered by the Nebraska Legislature in 1869.

Over the years, alumni such as authors Willa Cather and Mari Sandoz, legal educator Roscoe Pound, anthropologist and author Loren Eiseley, and scientists such as Nobel Prize-winning chemist George Beadle, inventor Harold "Doc" Edgerton and computer pioneer Jay Forrester have enriched the University's tradition of leadership and scholarly excellence.

Today, approximately 24,000 students from all parts of the world attend classes on UNL's campuses in Lincoln, Nebraska's All-American capital city.

The University is the intellectual center of the region. As Nebraska's comprehensive, land-grant university, UNL is committed to a tripartite mission of teaching, research and public service.

There's only one other way to enjoy so many thrills for so little money.

Fast rides. Lots of excitement. A day at the amusement park is a great way to get your adrenalin going. For the money, there's nothing quite like it.

Unless, of course, you're clever enough to buy Jensen® Classic car speakers or a JS car receiver.

Classic speakers give you big sound for a little price.

All the Jensen Classic speakers are compact disc ready, a feature you'd normally expect to find only on higher priced speakers. Although they're short on price, they're not short on power. Dynamic cone tweeters, long throw woofers and 2½" dynamic cone midranges (on our 6" x 9" model) give you up to 150 watts peak power. What's more, they're made in the U.S.A. and there's a model to fit any installation.

JS receivers give you features you can really use.

Any car receiver gives you plenty of features. The Jensen JS receivers have features you'll use plenty. Like Auto Reverse. Dolby "B." Seek. Scan. And 40 watts system power.

Two JS receivers even have compact disc player inputs. So, adding a CD player to your system is as easy as plugging it in.

If you're ready for thrilling car sound, but not prepared to spend a lot of money, there's only one thing to do.

Put a Jensen in your car. Turn it up. Then hang on for the ride of your life.

Quality instruction is emphasized in UNL's eight undergraduate colleges, the Graduate School and the professional graduate College of Law. The Colleges of Agriculture, Architecture, Arts and Sciences, Business Administration, Engineering and Technology, Home Economics, Journalism and Teachers College offer more than 100 degree programs leading to career opportunities in the arts, the sciences, the humanities and the professions.

UNL receives more than $30 million annually in grants and contracts from outside sources for research, instruction, public service, administration and student aid.

The University's faculty stands at the forefront of discovery in many fields. Among well-known research activities at UNL are projects involving biotechnology, meteorology, atomic collisions, mass spectrometry, polar ice drilling, cell biology, electro-optic materials, genetic engineering, transportation, hydrology, videodisc development, tractor testing, livestock and crop production, conservation, meats technology, animal and plant health, agricultural marketing and economics.

In service, the University of Nebraska-Lincoln reaches thousands of citizens each year through programs conducted by the Cooperative Extension Service and the Division of Continuing Studies. The Cooperative Extension Service provides all Nebraskans with information and assistance in agriculture and natural resources, home economics, family living, 4-H and youth development, and community resource development. The Continuing Studies program offers alternatives to formal on-campus education with programs such as summer reading courses, evening classes, independent study by correspondence, telecourses and study tours.

The Lincoln campus is home to the nationally renowned Sheldon Memorial Art Gallery and Sculpture Garden, the University of Nebraska State Museum, the Christlieb Collection of Western Art and the University's championship Big Eight Conference men's and women's athletic teams.

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln is an imaginative leader in American higher education. It is a university with a tradition of historic excellence, a quality presence and a dynamic force. □

KEEP YOUR EYE ON THE RECEIVERS

The point is, the average football fan sees really only half of every pass play. During last year's BYU-New Mexico game, for instance, all the fans saw was wide receiver Rich Zayas gathering in a 48-yard pass to set up a game-winning, fourth-quarter touchdown. All they saw during the Miami-Oklahoma game was the Hurricanes' Michael Irvin hauling in a 30-yard touchdown pass in the third quarter to break open a close game.

What the fan misses by following the ball, of course, is how the receiver got open in the first place, the way the play unfolded upfield, the strategy. Let's look at those plays again, in slow-motion instant replay.

BYU quarterback Steve Lindsley drops back to pass, while keeping his eyes on one thing: the free safety. All afternoon the free safety has been jumping tight end Trevor Molini, but this time Molini is a decoy. The tight end curls about 10 yards upfield and, sure enough, the free safety comes up to cover him, abandoning the deep zone. Except this time BYU has sent Zayas on a post pattern into the place the free safety should have been. Bingo. A long pass completion.

Similarly, Miami tight end Charles Henry runs 15 yards upfield, directly at Oklahoma's strong safety, and breaks to the right, to the sideline. As Miami offensive coordinator Gary Stevens would say later, "We baited him." And the safety takes the bait. He comes up to cover Henry, but, oops, Irvin, who has been running down the

THE PASSING TREE—Every pass pattern in a team's offense is part of a larger series, which, when drawn on a blackboard, can resemble a leafless tree, with every branch a pass route. In a game there would be even more turns and angles on each pattern to reflect the "moves" a receiver employs to elude pass defenders.

RUNNING BACK ROUTES—Because running backs begin their pass routes several steps behind the line of scrimmage, their assortment of pass patterns differs slightly from those of wide receivers and tight ends. The chart above displays some of the most frequently used pass patterns for running backs.

sideline, breaks inside, behind Henry on a post pattern, and runs to the safety's vacated position. Touchdown.

These strategic maneuvers can be found in the nation's secondaries every Saturday. BYU quarterback-receiver coach Norm Chow, who calls plays from the press box for a team that has led the nation in passing eight of the past 12 years, has compared his job to a game of chess. "I make a move, you counter, I counter your counter and so on, just like chess," he said of the give-and-take of the offense and defense.

There are as many as five receivers running routes to various places on the field, looking for all the world like the Keystone Cops. Of course, it's much more orderly than that. At its best, a single pass play is a series of carefully choreographed movements, each one to some degree complementing the others. The basic routes of a receiver are best illustrated by what is known as the passing tree.

"The passing tree," explained Stevens, "is a diagram of all the passing routes of a particular receiver. It starts with the shortest route and keeps branching out, climbing up to the longest route."

The pass routes are broken into three categories—short, intermediate and long range. Let's look at each of them, considering its situational use and the rationale behind it.

Short Range—These are short-yardage pass patterns, five yards and under, with the quarterback taking a three-step drop (about five yards). These routes are effective in short-yardage situations, and for countering blitzes and cornerbacks who are playing the receiver either too soft or too tight. There are three standard short routes:

- Hitch—The receiver comes out hard and fast to move the corner back, and then cuts and stops.

- Short Out—Again the receiver drives out hard, but this time he cuts outside toward the sideline. Usually this pattern is run to the weak side of the field where the receiver can avoid the underneath coverage of the strong safety (who of course plays the strong side, opposite the tight end).
- Quick Slant—The receiver takes about three steps, then cuts sharply inside at a 45-degree angle. Ideally, the pass is completed between the coverage—namely, the cornerback and the free safety. Another point: By cutting inside, the receiver can gain a mismatch—a speedy receiver against a slower linebacker. Also, if the linebacker has blitzed, then the coast is clear.

Intermediate Range—These pass routes are in the 10- to 14-yard range, with the quarterback taking a five-step drop (about seven yards). Their primary objective is to get between the deep coverage and the underneath coverage. The trick is to beat the underneath coverage of the linebackers before they can get back into their areas of responsibility. Some of the standard intermediate routes are:

- Drive—This is the same as the slant, except deeper. It's a bread-and-butter play to be used anytime, say in first-and-10 or second-and-10 situations. For obvious reasons, the drive pattern works best when the free safety vacates the middle zone—either because he has blitzed or because he has been drawn deep by a decoy receiver.
- Out—Known as a down-and-out on the playground. The receiver runs upfield and breaks—where else—outside. It's a common pattern but it has a liability, particularly against a man-to-man defense; if a defensive back steps in front of the receiver, it's usually a touchdown, for the other team.

- Curl—The receiver drives hard upfield, trying to make the corner think deep, when suddenly he pulls up and runs a little curl pattern, turning inside or out. As one coach pointed out, the worry is that the linebacker will recover sufficiently to step in front of the receiver as he curls.

Long Range—No wide receiver likes to hear this, but often long-range receivers are really decoys whose purpose is to clear out the deep coverage for intermediate players. "Obviously, the percentage for completing a longer pass is much lower than for the shorter passes," said Stevens. The long passes take longer to set up—the quarterback takes a seven-step drop (about nine yards), the routes are 18 to 25 yards deep, plus the defensive backs are deep-conscious. Here are some of the standard long patterns:

- Post—The receiver runs straight upfield, then breaks at a 45-degree angle. Again, the play works best when the free safety isn't there.
- Corner—Just when the receiver has tried the post pattern one too many times, he changes it. After making the initial cut for the post, he breaks it off and heads the opposite way, toward the corner of the end zone.
- Fly—This is largely a footrace. The receiver heads straight upfield, then bends slightly toward the sideline to separate himself from the defender. A variation of the fly is a comeback pattern, in which the receiver can break off early and cut outside, coming back to the ball.

With the proliferation of the passing game, running backs have become extra receivers. Said Stevens, "We [the Hurricanes] want to get running backs out there for two reasons: to get a mismatch with a linebacker, or to clear out the underneath coverage."

WHEN THE BLITZ IS ON,

The fly pattern is a footrace between the receiver and the defender.

Depending on their philosophy some teams throw to the running backs more than others. The Los Angeles Raiders like to throw over the coverage to the wideouts; BYU likes to throw underneath the coverage to the backs.

"Our quarterbacks spend the first 10 minutes of every practice just throwing to the running backs," said Chow. "We want them to know that if they throw to the running backs and gain just five yards, we'll never scream at them. We want the running backs to lead the team in catches." The reason is simple: If opposing teams don't think the running backs warrant serious attention, then they will be ineffective at clearing out the underneath coverage.

The running backs' routes are not complicated. "If the wide receiver turns out, the running back goes in, and if the receiver turns in, then the running back goes out," said Chow.

With five potential receivers on the field, each with his own set of pass patterns, a system had to be developed to communicate quickly in the huddle. Each team uses a different numbering system, but, for an example, let's examine Boston College's system. The quarterback might call the play Cup 866. The first word is the type of pass protection (in this case it's maximum protection, with both running backs staying home to block). The first number is the assigned route for the split end—in this case a post; the second number is for the tight end—an "in" pattern; and the third number is for the flanker—also an in route. In BC's system all even numbers are inside routes and all odd numbers are outside routes, thus quickly telling the quarterback where his receivers will be.

Another example: Right Roger 444-hook. Translation: The pass protection is to the right (which means the left halfback stays home to block on the weak side), the right halfback (Roger) goes out for a pass (a hook), and the wide receiver, tight end and flanker all run "four" patterns (curls).

A few teams, such as BYU, use a system that uses fewer numbers but requires more memorization. Pass play calls consist of just two numbers—say, 62. The first number tells the linemen the pass blocking scheme; the second number tells the receivers their routes (each must remember what particular route that number requires of him).

With so many choices, how does the quarterback know who to throw to? It used to be that teams designated a pecking order before the play ever got underway. The quarterback's first look would be to the primary receiver. If he was covered, then he went to the designated secondary receiver, and if he was covered, he threw to the safety valve (a short flare pass to a halfback). That's no longer the case, particularly at sophisticated passing schools such as Miami, BYU and Boston College.

"We [BYU] determine the primary and secondary receivers during the play, depending on what the defense does," said Chow.

"Nowadays the quarterback doesn't even watch the receivers; he watches the defense," said Barry Gallup, Boston College's receivers coach.

For example, a quarterback's first read might be the free safety—does he take the split end on the post, or the flanker curling in front of him? If for some reason neither of those receivers is open, the quarterback's second read would be the linebacker. Does he (the linebacker) take the tight end running a 10-yard slant or does he drop back to pick up the flankers?

Quarterbacks are not the only ones "reading" the defense out there. Receivers are no longer told simply to run a set pass route.

"Today's defenses are so sophisticated, and the athletes are so well-coached that you can't just tell the receiver to run a certain route," said Gallup. "You give them option-type routes."

The receiver can make two adjustments. He makes his first "read" of the defense at the line of scrimmage, before the play begins, and alters his route based on the defensive alignment. However, often a defense will give one look and then, to confuse the offense, switch to another after the snap. Now the receiver has to make a sight adjustment while on the run, and alter his route accordingly.

"The trick," said Stevens, "is that the quarterback and receiver will read the same thing."

Said Chow, "We give our receivers freedom, but within certain parameters. They can't just do anything they want to. We tell them, 'If you see this, do this; if not, do this or this.' We give them three choices at most."

Gallup offered a simple explanation of the options. "If the linebacker is on the inside, hook outside; if he's on the outside, hook inside."

Perhaps no receiver has a more complicated reading assignment than the running back, because he must decide in an instant whether he'll run a pass route, and where, or stay home and block. He must listen to a lineman's calls—which determine his blocking assignments—and at the same time listen to the quarterback's signals. (Is there an audible?) He also must watch a number of defensive players. If a particular linebacker rushes, for instance, he will stay in and block; if he doesn't, he goes out for a pass, and the placement of the linebackers determines the route.

Understanding all the above, now it's time to put it all together to attack the defense. There are basically two types of defenses: man-to-man and zone.

"Against a man-to-man defense, the receivers don't run to a spot and stop," said Stevens. "You keep them on the run. Against a zone, you go to a spot and settle down. Otherwise, receivers might move into another zone [and thus pick up another defender]."

Two ways to attack the zone defense are flooding and clearing out.

Flooding simply means sending more receivers into a particular area than there are defenders to cover them. Depending on which team you ask, defenses divide the field into eight or nine zones—five or six underneath and three deep.

"What you want to do is make the defense cover the whole field," said Gallup. "You want to spread the defense out."

One example of flooding a zone is to send the tight end on a 10-yard curl, the flanker on a 15-yard curl, and release the back on the same side on a six-yard curl. Now one linebacker must decide which receiver he will commit to, right or left. Coaches call this a horizontal stretch or flood of the zone defense. There are also vertical and diagonal stretches.

"Vertically there are a lot of holes," said Stevens. The idea now is to get the ball in the holes between the underneath coverage and the deep coverage. The defender must commit to the short receiver or the long one—as opposed to the left-right decision of the horizontal stretch. That's exactly what BYU did against New Mexico.

Ron Ross

Some teams like to throw underneath the coverage to their running backs.

One other note—some teams, such as Miami, use motion (before the snap) to allow them to get receivers into a zone faster. "It's like a fast break in basketball," said Stevens.

Clearing out uses "decoy" receivers to lure defenders out of position or make them commit to a particular receiver, thus "clearing" the way for another receiver. This is what Miami did against Oklahoma.

Here is another classic example of how clearing out works, and how the three different pass ranges come together to complement each other against a zone defense. The wide receiver runs a long-range route, a post pattern; the tight end runs a short route, a slant; and the flanker runs an intermediate route, a drive, coming from the other side. The flanker should be open. The linebackers are too late getting back because of the tight end; the free safety has followed the wide receiver deep on the post.

Against a man-to-man defense, the strategy changes. The receivers use crossing patterns, in which they come across the field from opposite directions hoping to lose a defender in traffic. Coaches try to gain mismatches (i.e. a speedy receiver with a slower linebacker) against man and zone coverages, through the use of formations, motion and particular pass routes. Timing patterns are also useful against zone and man-to-man defenses. With timing patterns the quarterback throws the ball before the receiver makes his cut—he is, in effect, throwing to a spot.

"Our receivers should never see the quarterback throw the ball," said Stevens. "If the pass is thrown after the cut is made, it gives the defender time to recover."

Of course, most fans in the stands will never see the wide receiver run his route. "Fans should watch how the receiver beats his defender, but it's hard to focus on that," said Stevens. "The fans watch the ball, plus they don't know if it's going to be a pass play." Too bad, because they're missing a game within the game. □

COLLEGE FOOTBALL LEGENDS

MARSHALL GOLDBERG

by Jim O'Brien

Marshall Goldberg remains a magic figure in football history at the University of Pittsburgh.

It's been 50 years since he paced Pitt to a national championship in 1937, yet his name still stirs the blood of alumni and fans who have followed the Panthers.

"Biggie" Goldberg, boy, was he something.

"In the open," wrote one journalist, "he travels with the abandon of a typhoon on a holiday."

"There was never a bigger thrill producer," wrote columnist Chester L. Smith in The Pittsburgh Press.

Hyperbole was big in those days, and Goldberg got his share of it.

He was an All-America at halfback in 1937, and an All-America at fullback in 1938, his senior season, and finished high in the Heisman Trophy voting both years. Two quarterbacks, Clint Frank of Yale and Davey O'Brien of Texas Christian, beat out Goldberg for top honors. Goldberg was third in 1937 and runner-up in 1938.

"Goldberg is a team player," said Pitt coach Jock Sutherland after asking his star to change positions after his junior season. "He would try out for tackle if I asked him to do so."

Sutherland also said at a Pitt awards banquet, "If I had a boy, I'd want him to be just like Marshall Goldberg."

Goldberg played pro football with the Chicago Cardinals over a 10-year span, interrupted by a three-year stint as a line officer in the U.S. Navy during World War II, and closed his pro football career when the Cardinals won their first National Football League title in 1948. A two-way performer in college, he concentrated on playing defensive back in the NFL.

Marshall Goldberg is an immortal, as they say, and he helped put Pitt on the national map as much as anybody who ever performed for the school in any sport.

He was a colorful performer. He came to Pitt from the mountain town of Elkins, W. Va., where his dad, Sol, a fun guy who got along great with the sportswriters, operated a movie theater.

Pitt was one of the top teams in the nation back then, a favorite of nationally syndicated sports columnists such as Grantland Rice, and Goldberg was a man of many nicknames. He was called "The Elkins Express," for obvious reasons; "Mad Marshall," for the manner in which he ran over and around would-be tacklers; and "Biggie," because he was small for his age as a high school player. An International News Service story referred to Goldberg as "the Jewish hillbilly."

Goldberg, a two-time All-America, led Pitt to the 1937 national championship.

This was back in the so-called Golden Era of Sports.

Until Tony Dorsett came along, Goldberg's rushing records at Pitt remained intact for 35 years. Still a star running back for the Dallas Cowboys, Dorsett won All-America honors all four of his years at Pitt (1973-76) and won the Heisman Trophy while leading Johnny Majors' Panthers to the national title in 1976. Dorsett established national collegiate records for career rushing.

Dorsett's record-setting career served to bring back Goldberg's golden days at Pitt, more than anything else, and reminded people of just what an impact he'd made on the school's program. Goldberg gained 1,957 yards in three varsity seasons, still the sixth best career mark in Pitt's record book.

Goldberg's varsity career coincided with the last three seasons of Jock Sutherland's storied 15-year reign as head coach of the Panthers. Sutherland is in the Hall of Fame, just like Pop Warner, the man he played under as an All-America lineman and eventually succeeded as the football mentor at Pitt. So Goldberg was part of a great tradition at Pitt.

At Pitt, Goldberg was a member of the "Dream Backfield" that rivaled Notre Dame's "Four Horsemen" in notoriety, and included Harold "Curly" Stebbins, John Chickerno and Dick Cassiano.

When the Panthers played before sellout crowds in New York, Goldberg was the subject of many sport stories, not only because he was one of the few Jewish sports heroes of his time, but perhaps because there were so many Jewish sportswriters in New York who were, naturally, excited about him.

He was popular, that's for sure, and he still is. He developed a business career while playing for the Cardinals, is the president of a machine company in Chicago, indeed a millionaire, and still cuts a formidable figure in a dark blue business suit. His curly hair has turned gray, but it complements his always-tanned face. You can still picture him with a dark leather helmet on his head.

That he looks in such great shape wouldn't surprise his old coach, Dr. Sutherland. During Goldberg's Pitt days, Dr. Sutherland once said of his star, "He swims, plays tennis, golfs, and goes to the movies. He is not a ladies' man. He is an exceptional, careful dresser. Marshall Goldberg learned to speak well in public. He'll do everything well that he tackles. He's that kind of boy."

Goldberg was his coach's pet player.

"I don't like to live in the past and talk about my athletic accomplishments all the time," Goldberg said. "I prefer to live in the present. I'm more proud of my accomplishments off the field. To me, playing sports should be a stepping stone to a career. It's not an end in itself."

He remains active in alumni fund-raising programs, is a member of the board of visitors of the athletic department at Pitt, and this past year he was presented with a gold medallion for his lifelong contributions to the school as it marked its 200th anniversary.

Last season he and 11 other members of Pitt's 1936 team (Rose Bowl winners) were honored at halftime of a Pitt-Navy football game at Homecoming ceremonies during the campus bicentennial celebration. He and Herb McCracken, a former Pitt player

It's the UX-80. Now Sharp's advanced technology creates a unique 3-in-1 business machine.

Sharp's latest innovation is an economical and smart way to help your business run smoother. Because you're actually buying three hard-working business machines but only paying for one.

First, use the new compact UX-80 as a facsimile machine. Within seconds, you transmit business documents—letters, diagrams, photos—across the street or around the world.

You can even Fax pages directly from hard-backed originals like books and ledgers. Most facsimile machines can't do that.

Next, use it as a copier that can also enlarge or reduce. With the finest print or most detailed graphics coming out crisp and clear. Copy after copy after copy.

Finally, you can use the versatile UX-80 as a touch-tone telephone.

All in all, it's one business machine that you'd expect from only one company. Sharp.

and coach who is also enshrined in the National Football Foundation Hall of Fame, and John Woodruff, who won a gold medal in the 800-meter run at the 1936 Olympic Games in Berlin, were paid special tribute that day.

Two of Goldberg's former Pitt teammates who were present at that Homecoming reunion recall him fondly.

Ave Daniell, an All-America tackle in 1936, who was named to the National Football Foundation Hall of Fame in 1975, at age 72 still serves as president of Ionics Inc., an international water purification company.

Talking about Goldberg, Daniell declared, "He could run like hell. He was a very elusive back, and very powerful. He was as outstanding in his day as Tony Dorsett was in his.

"I'm the only guy who had the pleasure of introducing Marshall Goldberg to Tony Dorsett, when Tony was at that [Heisman Trophy] dinner at the New York Athletic Club. Marshall and I had both stayed over from the National Football Foundation dinner at the Waldorf, and we were both seated on the dais at the Heisman Trophy affair. During the pre-dinner reception, I spotted Tony Dorsett coming through the room and I pulled him over to meet Marshall. Neither of them had ever met each other before.

"Marshall Goldberg was a winner, by nature. He was an elusive runner—like Dorsett—and he was a good blocker—something Dorsett couldn't say because the system didn't call for him to block. Like Tony, Marshall had natural instincts; he was born with it. They don't coach that kind of football.

"He was also a gentleman. He didn't smoke or fool around like the rest of us. I've often kidded him that I'd have been a helluva All-America if I could have blocked for Dorsett instead of him. I don't think he liked that, but that's the competitor coming out again."

Steve Petro, an assistant to Pitt's director of athletics, Dr. Ed Bozik, blocked for Goldberg and is proud of it. As a sophomore on Jan. 1, 1937, Petro got his first start as a Pitt guard in the Rose Bowl game with Washington. Pitt won that game, 21-0, before 87,000 fans.

"He was not only a great runner," Petro said of Goldberg, "but, for his size [5-10, 192], he was a great blocker. You had to block in the Single Wing attack. He played both ways with us. Dr. Sutherland would play the first team about eight minutes, and then use the second team for the final four minutes of a quarter. There wasn't any free substitution then. If Biggie could have played only one way, his numbers would be more like the ones Dorsett rolled up.

"He had a funny running stride. People didn't think he was going fast at all until they tried to catch him. He could make a 90 degree cut nearly at full speed."

It was as a runner, of course, that Marshall made his mark at Pitt.

In his first game at Pitt, against Ohio Wesleyan, he intercepted a pass on the first play of the game and ran it back 55 yards for a touchdown. He totaled 203 yards rushing that day to pace Pitt to a 53-0 victory.

That same sophomore season Goldberg gained 177 yards in a 26-0 victory over Notre Dame.

He gained 886 yards that year as Pitt ran up an 8-1-1 record, including the season-ending victory over Washington in the Rose Bowl. They were 9-0-1 the following year, and undisputed national champions, but rejected a return trip to the Rose Bowl—it's hard to imagine that happening today—because the players balked the year before about not having sufficient spending money when they were in California. In 1938, the final season for Sutherland and Goldberg, Pitt's record was 8-2. The Panthers' overall record during Goldberg's reign was 25-3-2.

Their victims included the likes of West Virginia (three times), Penn State (three times), Nebraska (three times), Notre Dame (twice), Ohio State, Wisconsin, Carnegie Tech, Duquesne, SMU and Fordham. After those famed three straight scoreless ties with Fordham in New York, the Panthers finally beat the Rams, 24-13, before a reported crowd of 75,867 at Pitt Stadium.

When Pitt defeated city-rival Duquesne in 1937, Goldberg ripped off a 77-yard end run the first time he touched the ball to win it, 6-0, and pay back the Dukes for an upset in 1936.

Against West Virginia, Goldberg carried the opening kickoff back 78 yards.

He scored twice on Wisconsin, one of the touchdowns coming on a 65-yard run.

Altogether, he scored 18 touchdowns in three seasons.

"Marshall is a football player's player," said Dr. Sutherland. "He's the first fellow on the practice field and the last one off. He was one of the finest backs I ever saw on any college team, and just about the best I ever coached."

Goldberg was elected to the National Football Foundation Hall of Fame in 1958. In 1963 he was named to the Sports Illustrated Silver Anniversary team, acknowledging his success on and off the field.

That meant a lot to Marshall Goldberg. "Football was a wonderful time for me, and Pitt was a wonderful place. I've gotten a lot out of it ever since. I may not have won the Heisman Trophy, but I came away with something more important. □

We pay these people to fly TWA.

Introducing TWA's Quality Control Team.

Since many of our best ideas about improving service have come from our passengers, we thought, why not take this process a step further?

TWA's Quality Control Team is really a group of 30 "professional" passengers. Their job is to fly TWA, and report directly to the Chairman what they liked, and what they didn't like. They have a checklist of over 100 service items to go through, analyzing everything from the temperature of the entree to the cleanliness of our aircraft.

Introducing TWA's In-Flight Service Manager.

Recently, TWA has instituted an In-Flight Service Manager on every flight who is responsible for all aspects of TWA's in-flight service. You have a question about a connection? They'll answer it. You need special assistance?

They'll take care of it. You've seen the movie three times already? They'll find you a great magazine. You get the idea.

The Chairman of TWA Has Made Service Top Priority.

TWA has always recognized that good service makes all the difference in air travel; so we're determined to ensure that ours is the best in the business. That's why the Chairman of TWA has made service top priority. In fact, if you have any constructive criticism, major gripe, or just lavish praise, he'd like to know about it.

You can write him at TWA, 605 Third Avenue, New York, NY 10158.

AWARD WINNERS

Each year the Maxwell Football Club of Philadelphia presents the Maxwell Award to the nation's outstanding college player. Past winners include Army's Doc Blanchard ('45), Ohio State's Hopalong Cassidy ('55), Navy's Roger Staubach ('63) and Cornell's Ed Marinaro ('71), to name a few.

Founded in 1937, the Maxwell Club promotes football in the name of Robert "Tiny" Maxwell, a man whose many qualities as an All-America football player, a respected football official and a noted sports editor and humorist endeared him to football fans across the country.

Perhaps the Maxwell Club's most important function is the financing, through membership fees and donations, of an awards program which is conducted during football season. Weekly luncheons honor outstanding high school and college athletes and provide a public forum for local fans and speakers of national note.

The Maxwell Club organizes numerous activities annually to enhance the sport of football. These include sponsorship of an athletic injury clinic for Philadelphia-area coaches and trainers as well as medicine clinics at the University of Pennsylvania and Temple University.

The selection of Maxwell Award winners

Vinny Testaverde University of Miami

begins with a nominating ballot being sent to club members, media representatives and former Maxwell winners. Each person nominates three players and the ballots are forwarded to the Maxwell Club executive committee. Using the players' season statistics and accomplishments, the committee narrows the field to three, four or five names. The club's board of governors makes the final decision.

The 1986 Maxwell winner was Miami quarterback and Heisman Trophy winner Vinny Testaverde. He was the first Hurricane to win the award. □

MINO LTA

LENSES FOR SPORTS PHOTOGRAPHY

Mike Moore

Let's assume, for the sake of argument, that you're pretty serious about sports photography. If that's the case, you'll be using a 35mm single-lens reflex camera. In part, that's because SLRs are about the most sophisticated amateur cameras available. And in part, you'll choose an SLR because then you can use interchangeable lenses.

What's the big benefit? Well, suppose you're sitting underneath the backboard of a Lakers-Celtics showdown. The standard issue 50mm lens will do just fine as Larry Bird and Company cross the half-court line, but what do you do when the action is hot and heavy under the boards? If you've got a 28mm wide-angle lens in your bag, two twists of the wrist and a quick swap can put everyone in the picture. Or suppose you're at the Super Bowl, sitting in the stands. The 50mm lens will do a decent job on the bands at halftime, but if you want to fill a frame with a third-quarter tackle, you'd better have a 300mm telephoto handy.

Besides bringing distant action up close or cramming nearby action into a frame, auxiliary lenses have other benefits. Wide-angle lenses—24mm, 28mm, and 35mm—have an unusually deep depth of field. If you're concerned about getting the foreground and the background both in focus, but the light is bad and you need a fairly wide aperture, a wide-angle lens can make the shot possible. For the same reason, you can "zone" focus (focus in the middle of an area you want to be sharp) and know that a good deal of what's before the focal point—and even more that's behind the focal point—will be good and sharp.

Telephoto lenses, not surprisingly, have a shallow depth of field, so you can throw the background out of focus on a bright day by using a 200mm lens. And since telephotos also make objects look closer together, you can use them to achieve dramatic effects... like stacking the Bears' defense to make it look even more imposing than it really is.

One thing to remember about telephotos: they're very susceptible to vibration. If you're shooting at less than 1/500, use a tripod, a monopod, or rest the lens on something solid.

Zoom lenses offer the best of both worlds. They're now available in focal lengths that range from wide-angle to short telephoto (say 28mm-85mm), or from short telephoto to very long (100mm-300mm). You'll sacrifice an aperture stop or two compared to single focal length lenses, but you'll have unparalleled convenience and you'll save some cash, too. And you'll have the opportunity to experiment with zooming during exposure, which can produce some dramatic sports shots.

If you're going to be shooting from the stands, a telephoto, zoom or single length, is virtually a necessity. In such a location, you won't be able to get physically close enough to the action to get any kind of impact in your shots. I'd suggest you have at least a 200mm lens for such occasions... a 300mm would be even better. If you're working in tight quarters—like right behind the net in a hockey game or under the backboard at a roundball event—on the other hand, a wide-angle lens is worth its weight in gold.

You usually have the option of buying an accessory lens made by your camera's manufacturer, one that's part of your camera's "system," or buying a less expensive lens from an aftermarket manufacturer. The system lens is often optically better because it can be optimized for your specific camera. On the other hand, the aftermarket lens usually costs less. The choice is up to you, but my preference is the system lens if you can afford it. Spread out over the life of the lens, the price difference isn't that much. □

BEST BOWL GAME EVER

1971 ROSE BOWL

Jim Plunkett capped off a year which saw him bring the Heisman Trophy back to Stanford by guiding his squad to a 27-17 upset of Ohio State in the 1971 Rose Bowl.

*by Art Rosenbaum,
San Francisco Chronicle*

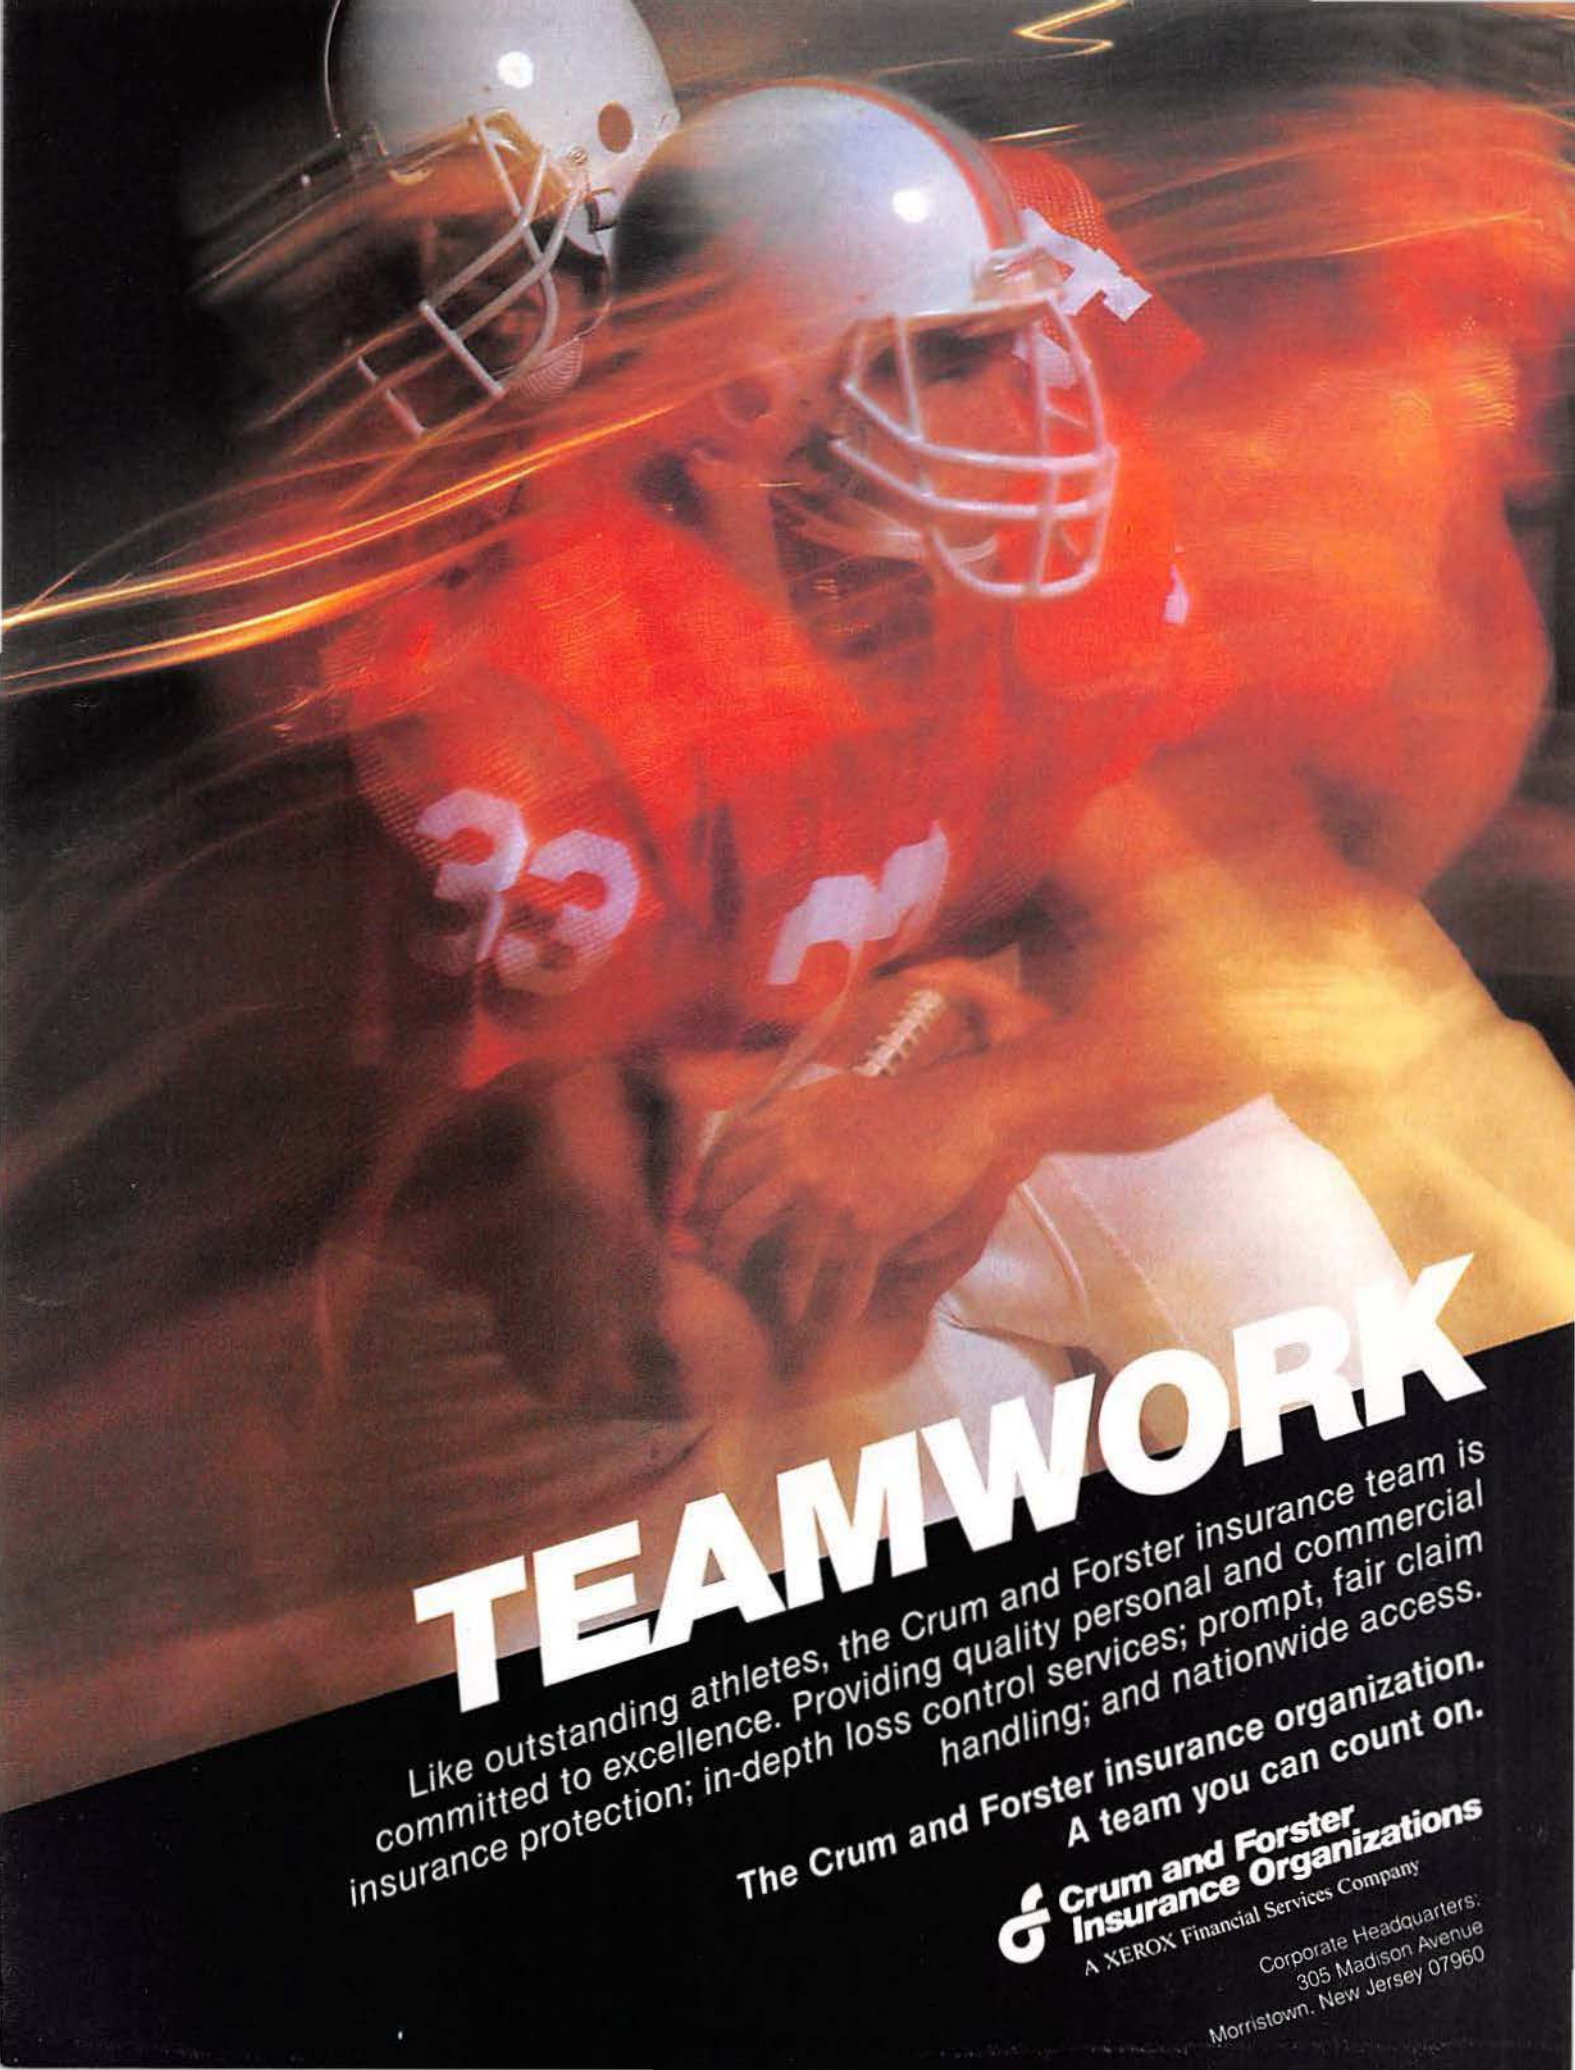

In my file of "most exciting bowl games" the 1971 Rose Bowl game heads the list. I saw, from the edge of my press box chair, quarterback Jim Plunkett lead the 1971 Stanford team to a final-quarter 27-17 upset over mighty Ohio State.

The game required 60 playing minutes but in retrospect and history there were several key events that were the decisive factors.

All 103,839 seats in the huge Pasadena Stadium were filled as Stanford and Ohio State awaited the kickoff. Then came the announcement over the public address—Notre Dame had beaten Texas. The Ohio State fans went ape. Thousands of tiny American flags waved, air horns bellowed and voices roared approval. Why not? Texas had been rated tops in the nation, but now Ohio State could become No. 1 by upholding the 11-point odds against a Stanford squad that had been thrice beaten that season.

The Buckeyes marched a brisk 41 yards on the first possession, but then were stopped on a vital fourth-and-one play. Coach Woody Hayes could be forgiven for listening to the imploring Ohio crowd—"Go, go, go for it!" The early successes indicated another 400-yard rushing day.

Stanford had the ball on its own 39. Now came the theatrics. Randy Vataha, whose early claim to fame was playing one of the Seven Dwarfs at Disneyland and now was Stanford's clever wide receiver, had a special role—to disappear. For the opening deception, Stanford would substitute 5-8 Eric Cross, the team's fastest man, who resembled Vataha in physique, for a surprise end-around. In the huddle Plunkett called the play—and then the Rose Bowl clock went dead!

There was consternation on the Stanford side. The lineup change and the trick play would surely be discovered while the officials surrounded the timekeeper's field table.

Vataha sought a place to hide his No. 18, and found it—under the dugout-style Rose Bowl bench. Lying flat, like a doughboy in a foxhole, he escaped detection.

Cross also wanted to conceal his No. 40. "As it turned out," he recalled later, "the officials' timeout for electronic repair took 120 seconds, a long time when you're trying to hide out. We went into an at-ease huddle and I looked for the widest guy I could find. That was Dan Lightfoot, only 6-1 but about 250 pounds. I shrank behind him for those long two minutes."

Time-in was called, at last. Cross took his place at flanker, or wide position, and as Plunkett faked a handoff left to a running back, then faked a pass left, Cross swept back to take a deep reverse and ramble right. For a split minute, Ohio State defenders were confused. This was not a Vataha-type procedure. Cross dashed 41 yards down the right sideline on Stanford's opening play to set up the touchdown that came four downs later. It was 7-0 after only four minutes. The Buckeyes had, been rocked back.

Now the Stanford side was a-roar, though some cynics remembered that Stanford also led Illinois, 7-0, in its 1952 Rose Bowl appearance. That one ended 40-7 in favor of Illinois.

This was different. Powerful Ohio State was regarded as being far stronger than Illinois had been, possibly one of the strongest Big Ten units of all time. The Cardinal needed guile and guts to stop the Buckeyes and win. It had both.

Stanford went up 10-0 on Steve Horowitz's 37-yard field goal, but Ohio State's combination of quarterback Rex Kern passing and running, fullback John Brockington smashing the line, and split end Bruce Jackowski rambling on reverses, produced marches of 65 and 55 yards for a 14-10 OSU lead at half.

A Horowitz 48-yard field goal—a Rose Bowl record—closed it to 14-13 but Fred Schram's countering field goal of 32 yards widened it again to 17-13.

In the fourth quarter Plunkett went to the darkening Pasadena skies with on-the-money throws to Vataha and tight end Bob Moore, moving the Cardinal to the two. Running back Jackie Brown slithered over from there for 20-17—a surprising Stanford comeback and lead. After an interception, Plunkett, working from the 10, sent Vataha on a post pattern. The fancy-footed Vataha's head feint and reverse move left him alone as the ball reached his fingers. Final score: 27-17. Stanford had dashed Ohio State's hopes for a national championship.

Without that extraordinary beginning—a defense that rose up to take the ball away, and a trick play aided by the distraction of the balky clock—it might have been another runaway for the Wishbone-T Buckeyes.

An hour after the game, the sometimes zany, self-styled "Incomparable Leland Stanford Junior University Band" was still playing its victory tunes. Then came the final conquest. The band had been prevented from playing its version of the national anthem because officials said it was not traditional. Now, as a concluding number for its remaining followers, the Incomparables rendered the "Star Spangled Banner" soul-o trumpet to a full band in crescendo, crashing drums . . . triumph.

Powerful fullback John Brockington led his Buckeye squad to a short-lived 14-10 halftime lead.

To be your best in Nebraska you've got to know the turf.

That's especially true in banking. That's why First Commerce Bancshares takes such pride in the deep roots it has across Nebraska. Each First Commerce Company is locally directed and managed by people who know the needs of the area they serve. Yet each company can draw on the strength and resources of one of Nebraska's strongest financial organizations.

Together the men and women at First Commerce Bancshares are dedicated to seeing Nebraskans win on every playing field.

Winners. Some people think of them as overnight sensations. Instant stars. The truth is . . . the climb to the top usually is the result of years of hard work. Dedication. A commitment to excellence.

Ricoh is celebrating its 25th Anniversary in America. During this quarter century, we have dedicated our talents and resources to providing the highest quality products for the office and home. Copiers . . . facsimile machines . . . printers . . . and cameras. We stand by our commitment to excellence. Every step along the way.

Send for a "Winners" poster. Include your name, address, and zip . . . along with $2.50 for postage and handling. Mail to Ricoh Corporation, Attention: Corporate Communications, at the address below.

The Feeling!

WE MAKE TOUCHDOWNS ALL OVER THE WORLD.

In fact, Pan Am makes touchdowns in Europe, India, the Middle East, Africa, the Caribbean and Latin America. And we fly from over 30 cities throughout the U.S. What's more, we have one of the best on-time performance records in the industry. Pan Am. The winning team, worldwide.

BOYS CAMP I (May 29-June 2)

For boys entering the fifth grade through boys entering their senior year in high school. All campers will be grouped according to their age and ability. Each day of camp will include instruction on individual offensive and defensive techniques, team concepts, and actual game competition.

BOYS TEAM: CAMP I CLASS C2, D1 and D2 SCHOOLS (June 5-9)

This week is for class C2, D1 and D2 schools and only high school age boys can participate. Each school must have a minimum of 6 players (we recommend 8), and a member of the high school's basketball staff will coach the team during the week. Each team will have daily practice situations. There will be lecture periods conducted by the Nebraska Basketball Staff. Each school may bring more than one team and if a school would like to participate in the A, B, and C1 Camp, please feel free to do so (we recommend this if you have a talented group of players).

BOYS ELEMENTARY/JR. HIGH DAY CAMP (June 13-16, Grades 4-8)

For boys entering the fourth grade through boys entering the eighth grade. There will be a morning and afternoon session with the noon meal being provided. This is a day camp and each camper must provide for his own lodging. The morning session will begin at 9 a.m. and the afternoon session will end at approximately 3:30 p.m. Instruction will be given on individual offensive and defensive techniques as well as team concepts. Each camper will play 3 or 4 games per day.

SPECIALTY CAMP I: BIG MAN (June 9-11, Grades 9-12)

The Husker Big Man's Camp designed for the inside player will concentrate on teaching moves such as the drop step power lunge, up and under move, the baby hook, the jump hook, and the bounce step jumper. In addition, drills to improve agility, foot quickness, and jumping ability will be stressed to improve rebounding technique.

SPECIALTY CAMP II: SHOOTING (June 23-25, Grades 7-12)

The Husker Shooting will emphasize individual instruction with fundamental skills of shooting. The power lay up, the hook shot, and the jump shot will be stressed. Fundamental emphasis will be on offensive moves without the basketball, footwork for shooting quickly and efficiently, proper alignment of hand, wrist, and arm, development of proper arc, increasing range, and shooting off the dribble or off of a screen. Video analysis will be used to assist development of proper shooting technique.

BOYS TEAM CAMP II: CLASS A, B, C1 SCHOOLS (June 19-23)

This week is for Class A, B, and C1 schools and only high school age boys can participate. Each school must have a minimum of 6 players (we recommend 8), and a member of the high school's basketball staff will coach the team during the week. There will be lecture periods conducted by the Nebraska Basketball Staff. Each school may bring more than one team and we do allow Class A, B, and C1 schools to enter their sophomore or junior varsity teams in our Class C2, D1 and D2 team camp.

BOYS CAMP II (June 26-30)

For boys entering the fifth grade through boys entering their senior year in high school. All campers will be grouped according to their age and ability. Each day of camp will include instruction on individual offensive and defensive techniques, team concepts, and actual game competition.

LINCOLN GENERAL HOSPITAL... DEDICATED TO PROVIDING THE VERY HIGHEST QUALITY OF HEALTH CARE AT THE VERY BEST COST

Quality Care

Providing the very finest in quality health care comes first at Lincoln General. We offer a full range of inpatient and outpatient services to meet your needs. Lincoln General offers some of the finest facilities, treatment, physicians, nursing and patient education programs in this region. We are recognized for our expertise in cancer prevention, detection and treatment; 24-hour emergency/trauma services; behavioral/emotional problem therapy and counseling; and joint replacement/general orthopedics.

Cost Efficiency

At Lincoln General, we know that by getting the most from our existing facilities and staff, we can increase our efficiency. This efficiency is returned to the community through lower costs.

Keeping the cost of health care down is also the idea behind money-saving health care options like Surg-Ease, outpatient surgery; our Family Birthing Center options; and Care Inn, where families of out-of-town patients save money by staying right in the hospital.

Providing the finest health care in southeast Nebraska is our goal and that means providing the most cost-efficient care as well. For more information on any of our services or programs call 473-5115.

Some fans go to great lengths to see the Huskers.

Some Nebraska football fans drive the length of the state to watch the Huskers play. When they come, they're probably listening to KRVN Radio.

They listen to KRVN for up-to-the-minute news and farm reports, weather and road conditions and easy listening country music. On those game days when they can't make the game, they listen to it on KRVN.

KRVN—the station for Husker fans on the move.

THE BEST SEATS IN THE HOUSE FOR A CORNHUSKER VICTORY.

We're turning weddings, anniversaries, business affairs, and celebrations of all kinds into Cornhusker victories every day.

It's the extra care and constant attention to detail that makes our catering reputation worthy of the Cornhusker name.

The facilities are unmatched and the menu selections offer endless possibilities, but that's to be expected. The Cornhusker has become Nebraska's preferred choice for special events from 10 to 1000.

Call the Cornhusker catering department at 474-7474 and learn more about turning your next special event into a Cornhusker victory.

HUSKER ACADEMIC LEADERS

Nebraska student-athletes topped the Big Eight Conference with 127 female and male Huskers making the 1986-87 honor roll. The Huskers had 45 more athletes on the honor roll than any other Big Eight school. Kansas was second in numbers with 82, while Iowa State had 71, Missouri 65, Oklahoma State 55, Kansas State 51, Oklahoma 45, and Colorado 27.

To qualify for the annual honor roll, student-athletes must have earned a varsity letter in their respective sport and have posted a minimum 3.0 GPA during the 1986-87 academic year. Of Nebraska's 127 honorees, 21 were letter winners on the 1986 Husker football team. Those athletes include: Tom Banderas, Clete Blakeman, Mark Blazek, Chris Carr, Dan Casterline, Mark Diaz, Micah Heibel, Blake Henning, Jeff Jamrog, John Kroeker, Rob Maggard, John McCormick, John Nichols, Stan Parker, Kevin Parsons, Robb Schnitzler, Jeff Sellentin, Rod Smith, Jeff Tomjack, Tom Welter, Jake Young.

The 1986-87 academic year also saw nine members of the Husker football team earn academic All-Big Eight honors, again leading the conference. To make the academic All-Big Eight football team, a player must be among the top 44 on the team and have a GPA of 2.8 (cumulative or in the previous semester). Those Huskers named to the All-Big Eight team last year include: Ken Kaelin (3.03, Recreational Management); Dale Klein (3.74, Mechanical Engineering); Rob Maggard (3.71, Speech Communication); Marc Munford (3.02, Speech Communication); Robb Schnitzler (3.46, Pre-Physical Therapy); Brian Siebler (3.69, Math); Chris Spachman (3.06, Speech Communication); Tom Welter (3.48, Business Administration); and Brad Tyrer (3.06, Speech Communication).

Nebraska still leads the nation for first team academic All-Americans. Since 1975, NU has had 24 student-athletes receive this honor. Stanford is second with 13. Last year, Nebraska added Dale Klein and Tom Welter to the Big Red academic All-America list.

One candle. That's all the light you need with the new Panasonic OmniMovie™ camcorder.

The light of one candle isn't enough light for some camcorders. The new Panasonic OmniMovie VHS camcorder PV-320 can capture the joy and radiance of your kid's smile. And do it by the light of just one birthday candle.

Because special moments happen without a moment's notice, this OmniMovie camcorder focuses and sets exposure automatically. The 6-to-1 power zoom lets you get really close to your kids. And its advanced solid-state CCD (Charged Coupled Device) imaging system makes your kids look brilliant.

To catch those one-in-a-million action shots, this OmniMovie has a $\frac{1}{1000}$ second high-speed shutter. It can capture your kids' expression while they're jumping rope, diving into a pool or grabbing for a ball. Just connect the Panasonic camcorder directly to your TV, and you can play it all back in crystal-clear slow motion or still frame.

Action blurs with standard shutter.

Action is sharp with high-speed shutter.

When it comes to recording all those special moments, kids' parties, anniversaries or vacations, no one holds a candle to the new Panasonic OmniMovie camcorder.

EVERY GOOD PLAYER DESERVES A BONE CLAW OR FOOTBALL

Thom White

Georgia's Bone

The University of Miami in Oxford, Ohio, is often called the cradle of coaches because so many of its former assistant coaches have gone on to lead Division I-A football programs.

But you can also call Miami the home of the helmet sticker, at least on the major college level.

Not much to write home about? Well, a lot of college coaches don't feel that way. Of the 103 schools playing Division I-A football, a telephone survey revealed that 28 are expected to use some sort of helmet sticker this season.

We're not talking about decals here. Most schools use an emblem on their helmets, but stickers are much smaller, most only an inch or two across. The reasons they are given to players vary from team to team; the most common is for a big play of some sort.

"I've given them out for interceptions, touchdown runs, passes or receptions, blocked kicks, those sort of things," new USC coach Larry Smith said. "In my last few years at Arizona, we'd give everyone on our team a sticker if we won, so we went through a lot of them. We'd give the offensive players a sticker if we scored a certain number of points, gained a certain amount of yards. We'd do the same thing with the defense, set certain goals as a unit and give a sticker to each defender if we reached the goal. That's the way most coaches use the system. You recognize individual effort, but always, in my book, it had to be within the framework of the team. That's what's important to me."

You can credit, or blame if you don't like the concept of the helmet sticker, current Army coach Jim Young for convincing Bo Schembechler to use helmet stickers at Miami in the mid-'60s, Smith said.

Smith was an assistant coach at Shawnee High School in Lima, Ohio, under head coach Young in the early '60s. Coaches were trying to find an incentive method to get their players to practice better when Young came up with an idea.

"Jim was watching a war film and saw a bunch of rising suns on the side of an American fighter plane, an indicator of how many Japanese planes that fighter pilot had shot down," Smith recalled. "He felt we could use a concept like that, so we started to give our players a little red devil, which we put on the front of their helmet. The player had to have a full week of good practice to keep that red devil."

Failure to practice well cost a player a spot in the Red Devil Club, Smith said.

"It was like that TV show 'Branded,' with Chuck Connors," Smith said. "If you remember, at the start of the show, they break the guy's sword in half and tear off his epaulets and all his badges of honor. We'd only give a player one red devil. If the player didn't practice well, we just ripped the red devil off the front of his helmet."

Young left Shawnee High School to join Schembechler's staff at Miami in 1964. By the time Smith joined the Miami staff in '67, the Miami Redskins were already using little tomahawk stickers.

"Ohio State's Buckeye leaf is probably better known, but I know for a fact that Miami was using a helmet sticker first," Smith said. "Woody Hayes called up Bo and asked him about the tomahawks because we had a lot of friends on the Ohio State staff. Maybe somebody else was using them elsewhere before Miami was, but they've used them every year since."

Longtime Ohio State equipment manager John Bozick confirmed OSU didn't start using the Buckeye leaf until the 1968 season.

"Woody loved that idea," Bozick said. "He used to read off the names of the players and the number of leaves they had won at his weekly press luncheon. It was tough to win them under Woody. Sometimes I had to give a player half a leaf or a third of a leaf. We're still using them, but they seem to be easier to get now."

The helmet sticker concept has military overtones, but the irony of that is none of the Army, Navy or Air Force teams use helmet stickers.

"When Homer Smith was the head coach here, he used to give out bullets or stars for the helmets," said Bob Kinney, the sports information director at Army. "Now there is a policy against doing that."

Many schools give out stars or footballs for awards, but others play off the school's mascot. Arizona (the Wildcats) uses little claws. West Virginia (the Mountaineers) uses gold muskets. Brigham Young uses little Cougar heads now, but at one time used hatchets and skulls and crossbones. Michigan appears to give out tiny blue footballs, but if you look closely enough, you'll see a little Wolverine inside the oval.

There are also variations on the helmet sticker theme. There's a political theme at Iowa. Each Hawkeye helmet sports a round sticker with the initials ANF. Those initials stand for America Needs Farmers. Iowa coach Hayden Fry, during the middle of the farm crisis two years ago, had the stickers put on the helmets.

At Toledo last year, it was an emotional theme. Toledo normally uses little footballs for its helmet stickers, but the only sticker on the helmets last year was the number 89, said sports information director Max Gerber.

"We had a player, Steve Dandridge, who was killed in an auto accident before the '86 season began," Gerber said. "Our coaching staff decided to just use his number, 89, and nothing else on our helmets last year."

The University of Georgia is a longtime user of helmet stickers. Georgia coach Vince Dooley said he brought the idea to Athens in 1971, after talking with Schembechler about the concept. He's been using them ever since.

"I like using helmet stickers, but I've never liked them on the front of the helmet," Dooley said. "I remember that when we first started using them we had a long discussion as a staff about what we should use. We thought we had a good looking helmet and we didn't want to use the stickers on the side or the front of the helmet. We finally decided on tiny little stars. Even Herschel Walker, with all the stars he won each year, always had them on the back of his helmet.

Helmet stickers are used to reward players for big plays.

"They are easier to win now. It seems each year we've added a category or two. Something always seems to come up that you hadn't thought about before. I don't mind at all that we give out more. The more the merrier."

Dooley said using helmet stickers should be "a fun thing" for the players, but he believes they can be used very seriously. He took the helmet sticker concept a step further in 1979 with a very unique twist. If a Bulldog makes a game-saving play, he gets a sticker in the shape of a bone with the initials UGA on it, and the player places that sticker on the front of his helmet.

"It's the old line about every good dog deserves a bone," Dooley said with a laugh. "It's an elite thing in our program. I'll bet we've only given five or six of them out and we list the winners in our brochure. Terry Hoage, our All-America defensive back, got the first one and I remember how proud he was of being the first player to get one. Our players take the bone very seriously."

But policies can change with coaching staffs. Arizona will continue to give out claws under new coach Dick Tomey, but they'll be tougher to get. Long Beach State gave out stars last year under Mike Sheppard, but with Larry Reisbig taking over for Sheppard, the 49ers' stars will have starless helmets this year.

Even Smith, who has used helmet stickers at every one of his coaching stops, will not be going that route at USC.

"I'm a traditionalist," Smith said. "I look into the traditions of each school I've worked at before I do anything. USC has never used anything like a helmet sticker, they've rarely used even an emblem on their helmets, and I will continue that tradition. We'll still give out stickers but we'll put them on the players' lockers instead."

There may be differences in stickers and differences in criteria for awarding stickers, but there are only two ways to look at helmet stickers: a coach is either for them or against them.

"I don't like helmet stickers because I feel they promote individual awards over team play," said Bowling Green coach Moe Ankney. "I've been in three programs [Ball State, Tulane and Arizona] where we've used them and I personally have never liked the concept. Our helmets are clean year-round at Bowling Green."

"I think you can create some dissension on a team using them. It's easy for a quarterback, a running back, a defensive back to make a big play and get his sticker. It's a lot harder for the linemen, especially the offensive linemen, to win one."

Dan Marino made a few sticker-winning plays for Pitt.

Robert Beck/FOCUS WEST

Some schools, like Notre Dame, like the clean look of an unstickered helmet.

Joe Tofflemire, Arizona's all-conference center, and Long Beach State quarterback Jeff Graham have differing viewpoints about helmet stickers. Tofflemire loves them. Graham said he doesn't like them.

Graham said he earned "a bunch of stars" at Long Beach State last year but didn't put them on his helmet.

"I have never liked the way those things look on a helmet," Graham said. "I might have put one star on my helmet last year, but I can't honestly remember if I even did that. I put my stars on my locker. I felt that was more appropriate. We won't be using stickers this year with the coaching change and that's fine with me."

"It doesn't bother me in the slightest that a defensive back or a QB or a running back can get more," Tofflemire said. "When an O-line guy gets one, he's really earned it. I won more last year than my freshman year. I played better, but we also had more categories to earn them in last year."

"I know a lot of programs don't use them, don't like them. It's not simply an 'Oh, you did a good job, here's a cookie' kind of thing. It can be a serious motivational technique." □

IT'S A NUMBERS GAME

Football is a game of numbers. Fordham and Pitt became widely renowned for not putting any numbers on the board—for three consecutive seasons they played each other to scoreless ties.

Johnny Lujack's number at Notre Dame was No. 32—a number that was embedded in the mind of every youngster learning about college football in the mid-forties.

Woody Hayes, the late coach of Ohio State, wound up with 200—the number of victories he led his school to. But he also worked to see that his athletes made their own personal scores in the classroom.

In 1962 Dartmouth, led by a fiery center and linebacker named

Don McKinnon, put the numbers 9-0 on that school's football log, indicating an unbeaten season that won the Ivy League title and showed the value of on-the-field leadership. It was the same at Wyoming in 1967, when a team vowed it would not lose a game and carried out that vow by posting a 10-0 season.

And then there was Carleton and St. Olaf colleges in Minnesota. They decided the numbers in college football were all wrong ... well, in a sense. They staged something they called the Liter Bowl in 1977 and translated all the important numbers into metric units. Except the final score, of course.

After Three Years, Still No Score

 Scoreless ties generally aren't memorable events, but Fordham and Pitt made a science of such games for three consecutive seasons in the 1930s. On a mid-October Saturday in 1937 it seemed as if everyone in the nation were tuned in to find out if either team could possibly get a point.

They weren't disappointed. No one scored, for the third consecutive year, but at that point no one seemed to mind because these games suddenly had become classics.

It is not easy to call a scoreless tie a classic, but the manner in which Fordham and Pitt played each other was mute testimony to what can happen when two powerful teams are so perfectly matched that they can cancel each other out.

In 1937 the game was played at New York City's Polo Grounds, where 53,000 jammed that old ballyard and watched the Pitt Panthers gain more yardage but saw the Rams get more scoring opportunities. The favored Panthers—how could anyone be favored in a game where no points had been scored between the two teams in the previous two games—were able to survive by keeping Fordham from the end zone but could only stand and watch as kicker Johnny Druze missed three field goals.

This game so typified big-time college football in New York City, where local colleges such as Fordham, Manhattan and New York University drew thousands of fans to the area's three big ballparks. But no game was bigger than Pitt vs. Fordham.

"We were frustrated for two years against them, and I thought we would win," said Alex Wojciechowicz, the Rams' All-America center, who had also been a member of the famed "Seven Blocks of Granite" defense the previous season. "We had remade part of our line but without any significant loss of talent. We also had more speed in the backfield.

"But we needed it because Pitt had a great back in Marshall Goldberg, and he was good enough by himself to carry their offense."

That's how he started out in this game, as Pitt ripped off 37 yards in its first four plays until Fordham's coach, Jim Crowley, shifted Ed Franco from right guard to left tackle. Pitt didn't get another first down until late in the second quarter.

Actually, Fordham's goal line was not unviolated. Goldberg scored on a five-yard run around left end, but tackle Tony Matisi was holding, so the play was called back. On the next play Fordham's Al Gurslee intercepted a pass, but that was nullified by an interference call, which gave Pitt a first down at the eight-yard line. But time ran out before the Panthers could score, and the scoreless legacy was maintained.

Wojciechowicz was instrumental in Fordham's blanking of Pitt. At the start of the fourth quarter he forced and recovered Harold Stebbins' fumble. The next time the Panthers had the ball, Wojciechowicz did it again, both recoveries coming inside Fordham territory.

"Of the three games, this was probably the hardest fought, because every one of us wanted to win after two scoreless ties," Wojie said. "It became almost a personal thing for each team to prove it was the best. I know everyone has different feelings about playing in a scoreless tie, but doing it three times is rather empty. The one thing we took away from those games was the fact that we played each other as hard as we could, and no one could say the better team won, or the better team lost. We were both better teams."

Fordham had three chances to win, but Druze missed field goals from the 25- and 30-yard lines and had another field goal attempt blocked. The third miss came after Druze recovered Goldberg's fumble at the eight-yard line, and a subsequent run by Dom Principe to the three was nullified by a penalty.

Bill Daddio, Pitt's great end, also missed a 33-yard field goal.

"I played in three games against Pitt and never saw a point go onto the scoreboard," Wojie said. "There aren't many players around who have been able to make that claim."

Not many... but that season scoreless ties must have been contagious because down in Philadelphia Temple played four of them in a nine-game schedule.

When Fordham and Pitt played in 1938, the years of frustration ended for both teams. There were a total of 37 points scored as Pitt won, 24-13.

Postwar Hero Johnny Lujack

Johnny Lujack was the consummate American football hero. He was Notre Dame's quarterback, and hence in those days, the most visible college player in America.

Of course, Lujack also led the national collegiate champions to a second straight unbeaten season, during which time the Irish never trailed in any ballgame and failed to have a post-to-post lead in only one, the scoreless tie against Army in 1946.

It often is hard to separate all of the publicity and hype that surrounds a good player from the effect of playing on a great football team, but in this case, Lujack was the genuine article. He was a great player who played on a great team... a team that might have won the national championship without him (but it would have been a lot harder).

Lujack seemed impervious to the driving, dominating style of his coach, Frank Leahy. Yet in every way, he did all that was asked and a whole lot more. In the words of one post-Leahy era observer, Frank had developed "the coldest, most efficient team that Notre Dame ever produced. It was crushing and relentless. The first string was not much better than the second string, which was only an inch or two ahead of the third and fourth strings."

Lujack became the quarterback of Notre Dame's 1943 team when Angelo Bertelli was called into the service midway through the season. Such was the impact of that position that Bertelli won the Heisman Trophy though he played in only six games. Lujack himself left for the service after that season and didn't return until the 1946 season, when Leahy gathered together one of the strongest groups of college players ever to play for one team. Many of them stayed for four seasons, during which time the Irish never lost a game.

Of all those teams, Lujack's 1947 team was the best. And Lujack was its most versatile performer. He had come to Notre Dame as a triple-threat, Single Wing tailback at a time when Leahy had just abandoned the old Notre Dame Box formation in favor of the T-formation. But Lujack never had a problem with the switch because he was a fine passer.

"He could also run," said one longtime Notre Dame observer at the time. "In his senior year, Leahy had plans of putting him at halfback, where he could run and pass when situations dictated. He had George Ratterman as a backup quarterback, and Ratterman probably could have been the starter on any other team in the country. He was a fine passer and a brilliant field general."

"But Ratterman ran afoul of the scholastic requirements. He left school to join the All-America Football Conference and Leahy's plans were shelved. But there is no doubt that had Lujack played at halfback, he would still have been the team's star. He was also just as good a defensive player as he was on offense."

Indeed, when Lujack went to the Chicago

Bears, Coach George Halas soon made him a defensive back, so he could use George Blanda's passing talents. Lujack became an all-pro safety.

At Notre Dame in 1947, the Irish were never seriously pushed except against Northwestern, when they won, 26-19. But, Lujack said, that game came the week after a very emotional 27-7 victory over Army, and it was hard for any of the Irish to get back to top form.

"Leahy drilled us and drilled us for Army because it was the last game in the original series, and we had gotten only a scoreless tie the year before," Lujack said. "He wanted us to go out big, particularly since we were playing at home and this was probably his last chance to coach against them. So we were just filled up with the Army game."

Terry Brennan ran the opening kickoff back 97 yards and the Irish easily had control of the game for the rest of the afternoon. But all they heard about for the week following was replay after replay of the contest, and not too much about Northwestern. "We had to hustle to win, but we had enough talent to withstand anything," Lujack said.

At the end of the season, Lujack was a runaway choice for the Heisman Trophy.

For Woody Hayes, A Very Good Year

Woody Hayes had not yet grown into legendary stature when he won his second national championship at Ohio State in 1957, but he had already established himself as one of the game's fine coaches. When he finished coaching at that school in 1978, he was indeed a legend and without a question one of the game's greatest coaches.

There is no denying that Hayes left a mark on the game, and on all those who ever played for him. The mark of a great coach in a very "people business" is what his players say when they no longer have to be with him every fall. Nary a discouraging word ever seems to have been uttered about Hayes by former players. It is some members of the media who have wrongfully portrayed him as the second coming of Attila the Hun—he was anything but a tyrant.

He believed in success, which in football terms was winning on Saturday, and at OSU he did that 200 times on the regular schedule, plus five more times in postseason play while winning 12 Big Ten titles—seven of those outright.

He also believed in individual success, not only on the football field, but in the classroom as well. For example, a player from Massachusetts once decided he had had his fill of Hayes' stern ways and decided not to return to Ohio State for his senior year.

"The day after football practice began in Columbus, Coach Hayes was on the phone to me," the player recalled. "I don't care if you like me or not, but you get your butt out here and get back in school and get your degree. If you want to play football, that's up to you. If you want to quit, that's up to you, too," he told me.

"I went back and played and I graduated, and I've never stopped thanking him since. He was a helluva guy to take such a personal interest in someone who wasn't even a regular."

Hayes was also some kind of head coach. He came from Miami University in Oxford, Ohio, to Ohio State in 1951. He won the Big Ten title in his fourth season and then again in 1957, in his seventh season. That 1957 team lost its opening game to Texas Christian University, 18-14; went the rest of the season unbeaten; and then won the Rose Bowl while being acclaimed national champion by United Press.

It has been said that Hayes disdained the forward pass, saying that three things can happen any time a ball is thrown, and two of them are bad. But that season, he made ample use of quarterback Frank Kremblas' passing ability, while at other times, such as in a 56-0 victory over Indiana, he didn't throw the ball once while building up a 28-0 lead.

Kremblas teamed with Don Sutherin, Don Clark, Galen Cisco (later a successful major league pitcher), Dick LeBeau and Joe Cannavino to produce some prodigious offense. In that monstrous win over Indiana, the Buckeyes rolled up 371 yards on just 53 plays. But they also could be opportunistic, as in a 21-7 victory over Illinois. The Illini lost three fumbles in their first three first-half possessions and Ohio State turned two of them into a nine-yard TD run by Clark and a one-yard quarterback sneak by Kremblas. They also turned a defensive stand at midfield into Kremblas' six-yard TD pass to Sutherin.

Sutherin and LeBeau were the offensive stars. Against Washington Sutherin had an 81-yard punt return and kicked four extra points, while LeBeau, a junior, caught a nine-yard pass from Clark. Clark had four touchdowns in a win over Northwestern, all of which helped the Bucks into the Rose Bowl, where they defeated Oregon State, 10-7, on Sutherin's fourth-quarter field goal.

That 1957 team had other great individual players, such as offensive guard Aurelius Thomas, defensive lineman Jim Marshall and linebacker Jim Houston, but most of all it had Woody Hayes... and everyone on that team was better for the experience.

So was all of college football, which lost a great friend when Hayes died earlier this year.

The Big Green Machine

Timing is important not only in running a football play but in producing a football team's perfect season.

It is credited with a role in Dartmouth's 1962 season—a season in which the Big Green went unbeaten nine times in their nine outings under Coach Bob Blackman. That's a record that had been matched only once previously in the school's history.

"Timing," said Don McKinnon, the center and a linebacker on that team, "was everything that year. I'd like to say we were a group of seniors who had just primed ourselves after two seasons of varsity play to do this for ourselves."

But timing wasn't everything. Good old hard hitting and quality personnel also played major roles.

"The truth is that we had some fine senior leaders, but a lot of great junior players turned what was a good team into an unbeaten one," said McKinnon.

McKinnon, who sometimes tries to brush off the season as something that "just happened," was one of the senior leaders. He routinely snapped the ball, blocked as few centers ever had in Dartmouth's history, and led a defensive unit that didn't give up a touchdown until the fifth game of the year.

McKinnon, a 6-3, 215-pounder from Arlington, Mass., was voted the most outstanding defensive player in his team's first five victories because of his work at linebacker. (And he noted that the defense dominated Dartmouth's first seven opponents.) Some say he also could have been chosen as the best offensive lineman for his work at center because no defensive player dominated him during the entire season.

But McKinnon credits the play of others on the team.

"Tom Spangenburg was underrated as a defensive player," McKinnon noted. "We beat Holy Cross, 10-0, and he ran 96 yards with an interception for a touchdown in the fourth quarter. It was the third pass he stole that day. After the game he was so mobbed by the fans that special police had to be called so he could get to the dressing room."

"Bill King, our quarterback, had an outstanding year, and he really set the tone for the team," McKinnon claimed. (Some, however, say the two must share equal billing.)

When the Green beat Columbia, they sacked quarterback Archie Roberts seven times, and King won the battle of the Ivy's best passing quarterbacks with three records and four touchdown passes in a 324-yard day.

"Bill was a great leader and on the field he was unflappable. That wasn't always easy when playing for Coach Blackman because we had every imaginable kind of offense. He knew them all," McKinnon said.

Blackman was a renowned offensive innovator. He used every kind of T-formation setup and occasionally sent his team into Double and Single Wing formations.

But he was "even more of a defensive innovator," McKinnon claimed. "We had more defensive sets than we had offensive sets, if you can imagine that."

"Bill called all of the offense on the field and I called the defense," McKinnon said. "We got it done pretty well, though we had a couple of scares in our final two games, against Cornell and Princeton."

Cornell had junior quarterback Gary Wood, a scrambling, lively passer who was a one-man offensive show. Dartmouth found itself in a 14-14 tie going into the fourth quarter. Then Spangenburg, one of those talented juniors, ran 19 yards for the tie-breaking score in a 28-21 win.

"Bill nailed it down with a final touchdown; it was his third of the day, so that shows what a big-game player he was," McKinnon said. "But on defense, Wood drove us crazy. I don't think we ever did figure out a way to stop him. We just had to outscore him."

The victory clinched the Ivy League title for Dartmouth. But without McKinnon's all-around play throughout the season, there might not have been any perfect record, let alone a championship.

"Everyone contributed that season," McKinnon said. "I can't really put my finger on any one reason why we went unbeaten, except to say it was our time—and we had the people to help make it happen."

Nobody Said Winning Was Easy

The only major-college team to finish the season unbeaten was Wyoming, and it did so because team members had made a private vow that they would not be beaten.

"The hallmark of that team," current head coach and athletic director Paul Roach said, "was the ability to do whatever it took to win. Sometimes they were a bit sloppy in games where they figured to win big. But there also were times when they looked overwhelming in games that were supposed to be tough."

Roach was the offensive coach of that 1967 team, a squad long on defense because the head coach, Lloyd Eaton, was a defensive specialist. Eaton made no bones about putting his best players on the defensive unit.

"The only exception was our quarterback, Paul Toscano, who came from New York City and who had been our starting strong safety the year before," Roach said. "Lloyd wanted him at quarterback because not only had he played the position in high school, but he was a fine athlete. To his credit, Paul worked hard all summer on sharpening his passing and doing everything necessary to step in and be an efficient player."

Going 10-0 isn't a bad mark of efficiency, but Toscano had good help—from running back Jim Kiick, who later starred for the great Miami Dolphin teams of the '70s; from kicker Jerry DePoyster, who set a career UW kicking mark that season; and from receivers Hub Lindsey and Gene Huey.

"But defense was our strong suit," Roach remembered. "Our best athlete on that unit was Vic Washington, who played cornerback, but who also moved in to play offensive halfback at times and was a great kickoff returner, as he later proved in the pros."

Wyoming led the nation in rushing defense, allowing only 42 yards per game—and just 423 yards in all—with a line led by co-captains Mike Dirks and Mike LaHood. The only Wyoming native on the team was linebacker Jim House, and he was a starter.

"There was nothing revolutionary about what we did," Roach said. "We didn't turn over the ball very much, so our defense was never at much of a disadvantage. Also, Kiick was a very strong runner who didn't allow opposing defenses to gang up on Toscano, and that made his job switch much smoother."

But Roach admits there were a couple of scary moments, such as the game at Arizona State when DePoyster kicked the winning field goal with two-and-a-half minutes to play after Max Anderson's 99-yard run had given the Sun Devils a 13-12 lead. The critical play was a pass to Washington, who made a spectacular lunge to snag an underthrown ball at Arizona State's 10-yard line. DePoyster, who earlier that night had broken Charlie Gogolak's NCAA record of 28 field goals in one season, added his third of the game for a 15-13 victory.

The closest call, though, came in the next-to-last game, against the University of Texas-El Paso. Wyoming scored 18 points, including two touchdowns within 49 seconds in the fourth quarter and then had to watch rather breathlessly while UTEP missed a last-minute field goal that preserved the Cowboys' 21-19 victory.

"We trailed, 13-3, at the half against a team we should have handled more easily, and the kids finally realized late in the third quarter they had better get moving," Roach said. "We got a TD within the first minute, and Toscano ran for two points. A few seconds later, Larry Nels recovered a fumble near UTEP's goal line and Toscano passed for a TD on our first play.

"It still took DePoyster to win it for us because he got the winning field goal late in the fourth quarter. But those kids didn't seem to like doing things the easy way because we got a couple of pass interference calls that gave UTEP a chance to win, except they missed the field goal."

"Those kids" never promised it would be easy—only that it would be perfect. 10-0 perfect.

First Down and 10 Meters to Go

When the 10,000 fans attending the game between St. Olaf and Carleton College in Northfield, Minn., heard the public address announcer say, "first and 10," they had to stop and think for a moment. On this day, it was not first down and 10 yards to go, but first down and 10 meters to go.

This was the first—and last—Liter Bowl, a brainchild of Carleton College professor Gerry Mohrig, back in the days when there was a big push on for everything to be converted to the metric system.

"We had fun with it," Professor Mohrig said. "We" certainly didn't mean his school's football team because St. Olaf won the game, 43-0, over their crosstown rival, but the game brought tremendous recognition to both schools and a wave of national publicity, including a couple of spots on the Saturday morning news shows that were interspersed among the cartoons.

Basically, everything in the rules listed by yards and feet was put into meters, meaning the field went from 100 yards to 100 meters, or 110 yards, in length; and its width went from 54 yards, six inches to 50 meters, or 55 yards. Ground-gaining rules were the same, meaning each team had four downs to gain 10 meters, or about one yard more than under regulation play.

"I got the idea from a letter to the editor in a national magazine, which some of my family had read," Professor Mohrig recalled. "Why can't we play football that way?" they asked me, and I couldn't give them any answer other than I thought it was a good idea. So I took it to our president at the time, Harriett Sheridan.

"She liked it and wrote a strong letter to Coach Dale Quist urging him to adopt the idea for our game against St. Olaf. It was our home game, so we had a bit of an advantage in setting the rules, though we had to clear it with the NCAA to be certain it would be an official game. They raised no objection."

Of course the man in the middle was Quist, who had to prepare his team for this unique, 110-yard game in a week's time.

"We couldn't do much differently, other than go out and play our regular game," said Quist, who no longer coaches at Carleton. "The biggest adjustment was coping with a wider and longer field, and putting more emphasis on passing on first down to get extra yards right away so we'd have more options on second and third down.

"I also thought that if it ever is used on a regular basis—and I'm sure I'll be dead and buried when that happens—a team with a good kicking game and a strong, physical team with some good bench strength will have the advantage."

Quist said his players were not awed by the changes, as the final score certainly indicates, and probably didn't even notice it too much.

In the game, St. Olaf gained 508 meters (556 yards) in total offense, while Carleton had 220 meters (241 yards). Tom Fiebiger of St. Olaf, who weighed 86 kilograms (195 pounds), was the leading ground gainer with 70 meters (77 in the official NCAA statistics). Steve Ostle's 36-meter pass to Wally Hustad in the fourth quarter was the longest play of the day, while Chuck Benson kicked four extra points and a 34-meter (37-yard) field goal.

Could this someday become the norm for college football?

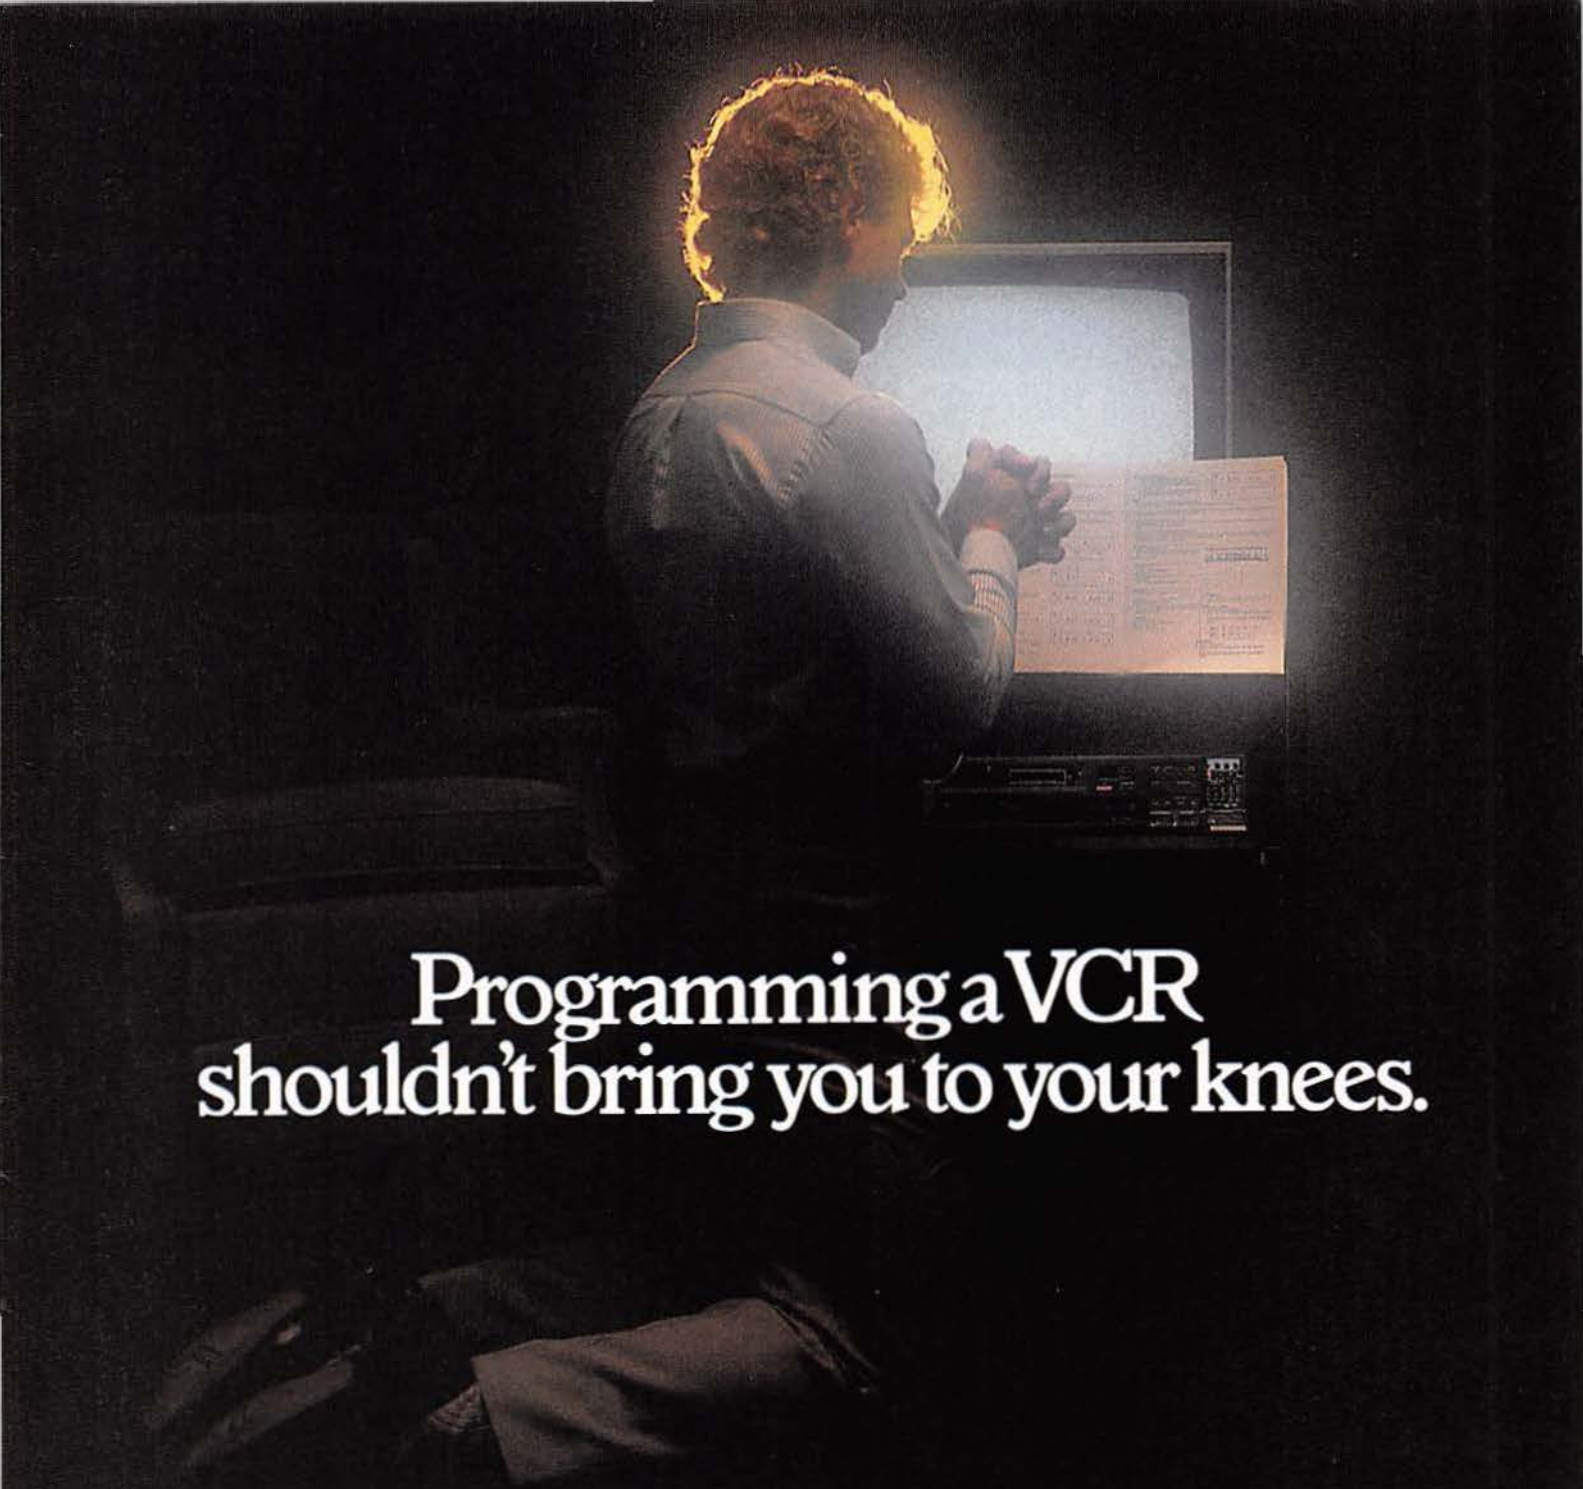

"I don't see why not," Professor Mohrig said. "The conversion from meters to yards is very simple, and they have done it in Canada for years because Canadian Football League [and college] fields are 110 yards long and 55 yards wide. The only difference in their rules is they have three downs to make a first down.

"While we lost the game, I used the experience to good advantage in introducing the metric system to my chemistry classes, and that gets everyone's attention," he added.

Now there's a good idea—using football as a teaching tool in the classroom. □

An old saying took a new twist thanks to T-shirts that were sold at the game.

Programming a VCR shouldn't bring you to your knees.

You are not alone. Millions of Americans who figured a way to get through Algebra, survived Chemistry and may be considered leaders in their chosen fields, turn to a quivering mass of jelly when trying to tape "The Blob."

Because even though you spent hundreds of dollars for a programmable VCR, most manufacturers don't seem to have spent a dime's worth of time on it. The directions make tax forms look like child's play. The controls can only be reached by a Yoga master. And even after you've completed the six or seven "simple steps" needed, you can only sit back and pray you got it right.

Toshiba now has a way to program that's completely foolproof. All programming functions are displayed right on the TV screen in bright, clear computer graphics. By simply touching the screen with our unique light-pen or using the remote control, you can program anything. If you make a mistake, you can see it and correct it easily. So it's almost impossible to screw up.

All our digital VCR's also have superb sound, picture quality, and the crystal-clear special effects only digital technology can provide.

See Toshiba's on-screen programmable digital VCR's. And save your knees.

SPECTRUM 2. WINNER IN 7 OF 10
CAR AND DRIVER TESTS, 1987.

ONE OF THE FEW ROAD MACHINES THAT PERFORMS AS WELL AS OURS.

INTRODUCING SPECTRUM 2.[®]
THE NEW STANDARD FOR HIGH PERFORMANCE RADAR DETECTORS.

Under this unit's sleek exterior lies the power of unprecedented sensitivity.

What separates Spectrum 2 from all the rest, however, is its unique warning system. A combination of an audible alarm and a numeric display – a readout between 1 and 9 that visually tells you when you have locked onto police radar and just how quickly you need to react. A photo cell automatically dims or brightens this display to make it easier to read in any light.

Spectrum 2 also boasts a micro-processor which reports a separate warning for X and K bands, allows you to set your alarm's initial response level to avoid annoying false alarms, and controls many other functions – all with the mere touch of a single button.

Or you can simply plug your unit in and drive.

This is truly radar detection engineering at its finest. And Spectrum 2 is backed by an exclusive 3 year warranty. The most comprehensive ever.

Nebraska's Trophy Winners

JOHNNY RODGERS

1972 Heisman Trophy

One of the most exciting players in the history of college football, Rodgers won the 38th annual Heisman Trophy as the nation's outstanding collegiate player in 1972. A two-time consensus All-America wingback, Rodgers became the Huskers' first Heisman winner as he outdistanced Oklahoma's Greg Pruitt and Husker teammate Rich Glover. The most dangerous player to ever wear the Cornhusker Scarlet and Cream, "Johnny the Jet" threatened to go all the way every time he touched the ball, as he averaged 15 yards per touch during his junior year, which still stands as an NCAA record. He also shares the NCAA record for the most punt returns for touchdowns in a career, seven.

MIKE ROZIER

1983 Heisman Trophy

Capped an outstanding three-year career by becoming the Huskers' second Heisman Trophy winner after a phenomenal senior season that saw him rewrite the Husker rushing and scoring record book. Outdistanced Brigham Young quarterback Steve Young to win the award after piling up a NCAA-record 929 yards on the ground in the Huskers' final four regular season games. Rozier finished the 1983 season with 2,148 yards, the second highest in NCAA history behind USC's Marcus Allen (2,342 on 403 carries in 1981). However, considering Rozier's NCAA season record of 7.8 yards per carry, he would have amassed 3,148 yards in '83 if he had carried the ball as often as Allen.

Mike Rozier became Nebraska's first NCAA rushing champion.

Johnny Rodgers broke OU's back in the "Game of the Century."

Larry Jacobson
1971 Outland Award

Rich Glover
1972 Outland Award
1972 Lombardi Trophy

Dave Rimington
1981 Outland Award
1982 Outland Award
1982 Lombardi Trophy

Dean Steinkuhler
1983 Outland Award
1983 Lombardi Trophy

LARRY JACOBSON

Nebraska's first Outland winner, Jacobson won the trophy as the defensive left tackle on the Huskers' 1971 national championship team. A Lombardi finalist, the 6-6, 247-pound native of Sioux Falls, S.D., gathered All-America and All-Big Eight honors during his senior campaign. Jacobson also excelled in the classroom and was the top vote getter on the 1971 Academic All-America team.

RICH GLOVER

A two-time All-American, Glover capped an outstanding senior year by sweeping national honors in 1972, winning both the Outland Award and the Lombardi Trophy. Glover's Outland Award gave Nebraska the distinction of being the first school to win back-to-back Outlands, a feat that would be accomplished again a decade later by Huskers Dave Rimington and Dean Steinkuhler. The 6-1, 234-pound middle guard from Jersey City, N.J., also finished third in the 1972 Heisman balloting behind Husker teammate Johnny Rodgers and Oklahoma's Greg Pruitt.

DAVE RIMINGTON

Possibly the most decorated offensive lineman to ever play college football, Rimington became the first and only player to win back-to-back Outland Awards. As a junior in 1981 Rimington was named Big Eight Player of the Year by both wire services and won his first Outland, setting the stage for his senior year, which he capped by sweeping the 1982 Outland and Lombardi Trophies. A two-time consensus All-America center from Omaha, Neb., Rimington became the second Husker to sweep the lineman awards and his consecutive Outland honors brought Nebraska the distinction of being the only school to win back-to-back Outland Awards twice, as he duplicated Larry Jacobson (1971) and Rich Glover's (1972) feat by himself.

DEAN STEINKUHLER

Nebraska again boasted the nation's top lineman in 1983 as Dean Steinkuhler, a 6-3, 270-pound offensive guard from Burr, Neb., swept national honors by lugging home the Outland and Lombardi Trophies, giving Nebraska an unprecedented three straight Outlands and two straight Lombardis. With teammate Mike Rozier winning the Heisman, Nebraska is the only school to win the top three honors in a season, and the Huskers have done it twice, first turning the trick in 1972 when Johnny Rodgers won the Heisman and Rich Glover took home the Outland and Lombardi.

"TRAPPED"

By trapping all the best features in the YASHICA 230AF, we've set photographers free. The 230AF 35mm Auto-Focus SLR's "TRAP FOCUS" lets you capture the action shots that have been nesting in your imagination.

There are 3 Auto-Focus modes: Standard AF, for general "Point-and-Shoot" shots; Continuous AF, for "follow-up" focusing on moving subjects; and the highly unique "TRAP FOCUS," which automatically trips the shutter when a subject enters a pre-focused zone.

The YASHICA 230AF is the first Auto-Focus SLR system offering automatic backlight compensation that adjusts instantly for perfect exposures, plus an integrated auto-flash system. It automatically loads, advances and rewinds the film and automatically sets the film speed using DX coding. All backed by a 3 year U.S. warranty.

Visit your nearest YASHICA dealer and ask to see the YASHICA 230AF with the amazing "TRAP FOCUS" mode. Once you see how it sets you free, you'll be soaring with the eagles.

"HOW I MADE $18,000 FOR COLLEGE BY WORKING WEEKENDS."

When my friends and I graduated from high school, we all took part-time jobs to pay for college.

They ended up in car washes and hamburger joints, putting in long hours for little pay.

Not me. My job takes just one weekend a month and two weeks a year. Yet, I'm earning $18,000 for college.

Because I joined my local Army National Guard.

They're the people who help our state during emergencies like hurricanes and floods. They're also an important part of our country's military defense.

So, since I'm helping them do such an important job, they're helping me make it through school.

As soon as I finished Advanced Training, the Guard gave me a cash bonus of $2,000. Then, under the New GI Bill, I'm getting another $5,000 for tuition and books.

Not to mention my monthly Army Guard paychecks. They'll add up to more than $11,000 over the six years I'm in the Guard.

And if I take out a college loan, the Guard will help me pay it back—up to $1,500 a year, plus interest.

It all adds up to $18,000—or more—for college for just a little of my time. And that's a heck of a better deal than any car wash will give you.

THE GUARD CAN HELP PUT YOU THROUGH COLLEGE, TOO. SEE YOUR LOCAL RECRUITER FOR DETAILS, CALL TOLL-FREE 800-638-7600,* OR MAIL THIS COUPON.

Do you have any Famous Grouse?"
asked one good friend of another.
"No, I don't," he lied.

Of course, it was shameless. But consider the circumstances.

Until recently, most Americans couldn't lay hands on a bottle of The Famous Grouse. Visitors to Scotland learned in a sip or two why this deluxe Scotch ranks first in the land of Scotch. So, they would lug home their limit.

Others discovered it in London clubs and would dash to the duty-free shops for a private supply. Which, sadly, they kept private.

Now, of course, this rare bird is in America in quantities to share.

With extremely good friends, of course.

THE FAMOUS GROUSE®
Scotland sends its best.

Remember special occasions by sending a gift of The Famous Grouse anywhere in the continental U.S. where allowed by state law. Call toll-free 1-800-238-4373. The Famous Grouse®

1995 Big Eight Schedule to be determined

Now you can put yourself in the shoes of an all-star. No matter what field you're in.

"I've endorsed these shoes because of their fresh styling and superior comfort. The standard of excellence is obvious in the quality construction built into every shoe. And the great value speaks for itself. Whether for dress, casual, athletic, or outdoor, look for Roger Staubach Sport Styles. They've earned my support. They'll earn yours too."

NEBRASKA FOOTBALL

The Coaches • The Players • The Experience

Big Red is a source of towering pride to Nebraskans. Nebraska Football chronicles the rise of the Cornhuskers from modest beginnings in 1890 to the national spotlight as one of the "winningest" teams in college football. Here are the behind-the-scenes stories of what it took to build a football program that has produced perennial conference titles, two national championships, and such Heisman Trophy winners as Johnny Rodgers and Mike Rozier.

168 pages, 7 x 10 inches, preface, list of championships, bibliography, 49 b&w photographs. $19.95 program statement for the renovation was written in 1974. In 1977, the College of Architecture sponsored a national design competition for architectural facilities. The winning design, submitted by Bahr Vermeer & Haecker Architects of Lincoln, featured both the renovation and the connecting link between Architectural Hall and the Former Law Building, which was already being used by the College of Architecture.

Funding was passed by the 1984 Nebraska Legislature, and while the cost of the project had to be reduced by 50 percent, the design remained essentially that of Bahr Vermeer & Haecker.

Funding totalled $4.38 million, and renovation work on Former Law began in spring, 1985. Architecture classes and offices were moved to Architecture West in the fall of 1986, and renovation on Architectural Hall began.

"Environment is as important to architecture instruction as a well equipped lab is to chemistry," said

Two buildings joined together to form Architecture Center

By Andrea Wood Cranford
Editor of Nebraska Alumnus

"Architecture has been taught at UNL for 93 years," says Cecil Stewart, dean of the College of Architecture. "But there has never been a single space carefully designed for its teaching. Until now."

The renovation of Architecture (formerly Architectural) Hall, the oldest building at UNL and the only campus building on the National Register of Historic Places, is done. The 93-year-old building now joins the previously renovated Former Law Building, now joined to Architecture Hall by a connecting link, to form the College of Architecture's greatly expanded and modernized teaching facilities.

The renovation project began in 1985, nearly a decade after the first Dean Steward.

To that end, architecture students now have "three distinct environments," according to Steward. First and second year students share "modern" studios in the renovated law library stacks. Third and fourth year students occupy "beaux-arts" studios in the open space that was formerly the law library. And fifth and sixth year students enjoy "French garret" studios in the attic of Architectural Hall.

In all, students and faculty now have 60,000 square feet of usable space. Architecture West features architecture faculty and support functions, including facilities for computers, media and student activities, in addition to the student design studios. Architecture Hall houses the dean's office, college library, planning faculty, community service and research project, design studios and a 2,500-square foot exhibit gallery dedicated to the alumni.

The former Law College entrance is visible inside the link.

Cornhusker Wheel Club 1987

Automobile dealers in Nebraska are contributing a large measure of help to the University of Nebraska athletic program through the loan of courtesy cars. Like other programs which are a part of the Cornhusker booster group activities, this project enables the Nebraska Athletic Department to make greater use of its funds.

These sports-minded dealers around the state have earned a debt of gratitude from the University of Nebraska Athletic Department. They are an important part of the "team" that includes players, coaches, administration, faculty, staff, students, alumni, Husker Educational Award group, Touchdown Club, Extra Point Club, Beef Club and the courtesy car program.

If it hadn't been for Nebraska Alumni,
today you'd be sitting in this stadium.

In 1922, the executive committee of the Nebraska Alumni Association took over the task of raising funds for Memorial Stadium. The original Nebraska Memorial Association started a campaign in 1920, but was unsuccessful.

Determined to succeed, the alumni committee, led by alumni secretary Harold Holtz, '17, accepted "anything from pigs to thousand dollar checks" from donors to raise the targeted $430,000. The results were tremendous.

In typical Nebraska fashion, Memorial Stadium was paid for before it was built.

Men who love contact sports, love the great smell of Brut.

Brut®. It smells like a man.
